. A STRANGE INSECT

The Aweto Is Half Plant and Found In New Zealand.

The aweto, as the Maoris, or native of New Zealand, call it, or Hipialis viscens, as naturalists term it, is found in New Zealand and is a vegetable caterpillar of from three to four inches in length, and so far science has not been able to say whether it is a vegetable or an insect. It is always found at the foot of large myrtle trees that have beautiful red flowers on their stem and a beautiful creeping clematis as white as the snow. The Maoris call this tree by the name of ricta. The aweto buries itself among the roots of the rata a few inches below the ground and there lives until it is full grown when it undergoes a most wonderful change. The spore of a vegetable fun gus, termed by naturalists Sophoeris robertsii, fastens itself to the neck of the caterpillar just between the head and the first ring and then grows up ward to the height of from six to eight nches. Many people assert that ther is never more than one stem, but such not the case, for some have been found with two stems, although very

The stem shoots up out of the ground above where the caterpillar is living about two or three inches. Below the earth it grows into the aweto until it fills up every possible space within the outer skin without changing the form of the insect in the slightest way what soever, but simply substituting a vege table matter for animal matter. As soon as this takes place both the plant and caterpillar become dry and hard and die, but retain exactly the same form as when alive. The whole has a brown color, and the insect appears wooden caterpillar with a huge horn standing up from the back of its neck. How the caterpillar manages to propagate its species no one can tell. Usually the caterpillar becomes a chrysalis, the chrysalis changes into a moth, the moth lays eggs, and these eggs again become caterpillars, and so on without stopping. Many reasons are given why the plant shoots up from the back of the neck of the aweto. One is that the awete has a slimy substance oozing out from its neck, which while the awete is boring at the foot of the sita tree for its only food catches the seeds of the fungus and holds it fast there till the latter begins to grow. When it has sucked all the vegetable life out of the aweto it must naturally die, for it finds no further nourishment. The aweto is often found in large numbers.

"The other morning I was in the leading hotel of a flourishing up state town. The breakfast bill of fare read as usual, 'Fruit in season.' The season of cantaloupes and other good things was at its height, but what do you suppose they had? Prunes! Oh, the perennial prune-always in season. and the crop is never a failure!"

The Poor Moon. Natives in Bulawayo, South Africa, have a curious belief concerning the moon. They say that he has two wives, one of whom treats him well and the other badly. During the first quarter he goes over the hills to the Zambezi and lives with his first wife, whom they call Keep the Door Open. She feeds him so well that he gets fat and full and round. But on his way back he stays at the hut of the second wife-Shut the Door Tight—who starves and ill treats him, so it is a very thin

Most animals have an utter abhorence of tobacco in any shape or form, says the proprietor of a menagerie. I have myself made even a really ferocious dog turn tail simply by puffing smoke in its face, but I do not mend the means as one to be always

The parrot is perhaps of all birds the most apt to take up bad habits. A friend of mine has one which is passionately fond of eating and chewing tobacco. If given a sufficient quantity the bird will make itself positively drunk with the nicotine and will stagger about its cage in exact imitation of the actions of an intoxicated human being. Long practice has made the bird something of a connoisseur re-specting its favorite luxury, and it now treats fine cut tobaccos with contempt. Its particular delight is the plug af-

A man after puffing at a cigarette for a time threw it down near a monkey which had been watching the proceedings intently. The animal snatched it up and puffed gravely for a few minutes. Then a look of intense bewilderment stole over its face, and, throwing the cigarette down, it retired into a corner, evidently very ill.

One of the champion elms of Maine stands in Hallowell. Its girth is 37 feet 10 inches, and it has a spread of top, measured at right angles, of 106 feet by 111 feet. This elm has a most magnificent and symmetrical top, throwing out its branches more than fifty feet in all directions. Down in old York they have some elms of which they are justly proud. One known as the Grant elm has a girth of 17 feet 8 inches and spread of top 71 feet. Another very symmetrical elm stands but a few yards from the York village postoffice

To Dr. R. V. Pierce. End Decker.

Many mothers of families in the United States have reason to be grateful to the person who recommended Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a medicine specially prescribed for diseases of womankind. It does not cure eczema, extarth in all its forms, nor heart disease, for it is put up for the single purpose of curing diseases peculiar to women. It has a reputation of thirty-five years of cures, and has sold more largely on this continent than any other medicine for women. Another point in its favor—it does not contain a single drop of alcohol or of any narcotic. It is purely vegetable. An alcoholic compound for women is something no woman should take. Womanly weakness will always bring on nervous irritability and a nervous condition, for which alcohol is the worst thing in the world. What the woman needs is a vegetable tonic, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will build up her delicate system and bring about a healthy tone. It cures the drains and weaknesses of women, and the mannfacturers offer to pay $500 rewarf for any case of Leucornhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial.

If you want to know what alls you the United States mall will bring you the best medical advice for only the cost of writing materials and stamps.

In swimming under a blazing sun the body is submerged at a low tempera-ture while the full force of the sun beats on the unprotected head. To add to the obvious dangers of such a state of things the blood is forced into the head by the pumping action of the limbs in swimming, thus causing the arteries in other parts of the body to be overfilled. The consequence is often a violent headache, which may be followed by insensibility. The swimmer sinks and unless help is at hand adds another to the long list of the mysteri-
