Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and atrengt to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching and vitalizing the blood.

The First Sign

Failing Health. Tailing Fleatin.

Ten years ago my health began to fall. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended to the state of the

I have used Are's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrohia, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alternative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Gresuville, Tenn.

M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I begon taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my beadache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Spring-field, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilia. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered. —H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"What I want to ask is this: I want to know if we have joined this order to listen to chin-music the rest of our lives, or to do somethin'. There is some kind of men that kin talk tell day of jedg-ment, lettin' Gabrel toot and then begin-nin' ag'in. I sin't that kind; I j'ined to nin' agin. I ain't that kind; I jined to do somethin';—what's to be done?" He sat down with his hand on his hip, equarely facing the luckless Bott, whose face grew as purple as the illuminated side of it. But he opened not his mouth. Offitt answered the question: "I would state," he said glibly, "the cheets we represent a accomplish the objects we propose to accomplish: the downfall of the money power, the rehabitation of labor, the—"

"Oh, yes!" Bowersox interruped, "I know all about that,—but what are we goin' to do?"

Offitt paled a little, but did not flinch at the savage tone of the surly bate. He egan again in his smoothest manner: "I am of the opinion that the discus-sion of sound principles, such as we have listened to to-night, is among the Pijects of our order. After that organ-ization for mutual profit and protection against the minions of the money power, from their lethargy, which, like a leader "I want to know," growled Bowers with sullen obstinacy, "what's to b

"Weil, i motion that we stop takin and commence doin"—"

"Do you suggest that a committee be appointed for that purpose?"

"Yes, anything." And the chairman appointed Bowersox, Bott, and Folgum appointed Bowersox, Bott, and Folgum such a committee.

All breathed more freely and felt as if something practical and energetic had been accomplished. The committee would, of course, never meet nor report, but the colloquy and the prompt action taken upon it made every one feel that the evening had been interesting and profitable. Before they broke up, Sleeny was asked for his initiation fee of two dollars, and all the brethern were dunned for their monthly dues. were dunned for their monthly dues.

"What becomes of this money?" the neophyte bluntly inquired of the hie rophant.

"It pays the rent and lights," said Offitt, with unbashed front, as he retur-ed his greasy wallet to his pocket. "The rest goes for propagatin' our ideas and especially for influencin' the press." Sleeny was a dull man, but made up his mind on the way home that the question which had so long puzzled him — how Offitt made his living—was partly solved. VI.

TWO MEN SHAKE HANDS. Sleeny, though a Bread-winner in full standing, was not yet sufficiently impressed with the wrongs of labor to throw down his hammer and saw. He continued to work upon Farnham's conservatory, under the direction of Fergu Ferguson, the gardener, with the same nstinctive fidelity which had always characterized him. He had his intervals of right feeling and common sense, when he reflected that Farnham had done him no wrong, and probably intended no wrong to Maud, and that he was no manuscript for the ull but that was the answerable for the ill luck that met him in his wooing, for Maud had refused him before she ever saw Farnham. But, once before she ever saw Farnham. But, once in a while, and especially, when he was in company with Offitt, an access of jealous fury would come npon him, which found vent in imprecations which were none the less for being slowly and haltingly uttered. The dark skinned, unwholesome-looking Bread-winner found a singular delight in toramenting the powerful young fellow. He felt a spontaneous hatred for him, for many reasons. His shapely build, his curly blond taneous hatred for him, for many res-sons. His shapely build, his curly blond hair and beard, his frank blue eye, first attracted his envious notice; his ateady, contented industry excited in him a de-sire to pervet a workman whose daily life was a practical argument against the doctrines of socialism, by which Offitt made a part of his precarious living; and after he had met Maud Matchin and had felt, as such natures will, the force of her
