The Mysterious V.C.

STORY OF HEROIC BATTLE OF "Q" SHIP WITH U-BOAT.

(New York Herald.)

When Captain Gordon Campbell, of the British Navy, received the Victoria Cross early in February of 1917, the imagination of the civilized world was aroused until he became known as the "mysterious V.C." The British Government announced that Captain Campbell's act would not be revealed until the end of the war. Since the armistice has been signed, the British Bureau of Information has related the circumstances. The reason that the details of the action were withheld was that Captain Campbell was the commander of several "Q" boats in the course of the war, and there was reason to believe that the British White Ensign was hoisted, the order to fire was given and a blast of guns aimed point blank at the U-boat which was just stepping onto the deck and was blown to atoms with the great salvo from the apparently defenceless "Q" boat. The boats were recalled to the stricken ship and help signalled for.

Lincoln An Example.

One of the Many Great Writers Unlearned in Greek or Latin.

Several times recently, in Letters to the Editor, reference has been made to the practicability of acquiring a clear, neat, strong, and direct style of English writing without the aid of Latin. Possibly the strongest impartial authority that could be quoted on the subject is Viscount Bryce, former English Ambassador to the United States, and a ripe classical scholar. After alluding to the fact that "Comparatively few of those who have given us our modern literature are learned in Greek or Latin, nor retain a knowledge of either language sufficient to afford either us or pleasure to them through the rest of life," he says: "Let us frankly admit these facts. Let us also discard some weak arguments, our professors have used, such that no one can write a good English style without knowing Latin. There are too many cases to the contrary. Nothing is gained by trying to defend an untenable position." One of the most striking of these cases is among us in the person of President Lincoln. Although preceded and followed in the Presidential office by men who had received long and thorough college and university training there is, nevertheless not one of them his equal in clarity, brevity, and felicity of expression. "His simple, luminous sentences," says one of our national writers "are models that cannot be improved upon." Even President Wilson falls short of him. Lincoln stands among the Presidents as the peerless prince of classic prose. One knew neither Latin nor Greek, still The London Spectator declared that "he is among the greatest masters of prose ever produced by the English race."

Food.

Let Germany ask of the cold, gray sea the wheat that might have been green again.

In generous fields for the good of man. Let her ask for fruit of the murdered trees— Has she already forgotten these? In the midst of her crying who has heard Any regret for deed or word? Is there repentance in Germany? Let Germany ask of the mothers who have heard their children crying for bread While insistent brutes were warmed and fed. There is wheat enough in the cold, gray sea To feed a city in Germany. Let her send her submarines to-day To find the food that she threw away. This is the thing she can do! Let Germany say to the world one word Of her broken faith and her bitter shame, Let Germany call herself by name,

History's Greatest Judgment.

Nemesis has overtaken every monarch and public man who shared in the blood-guilt of the war, says the Toronto Globe.

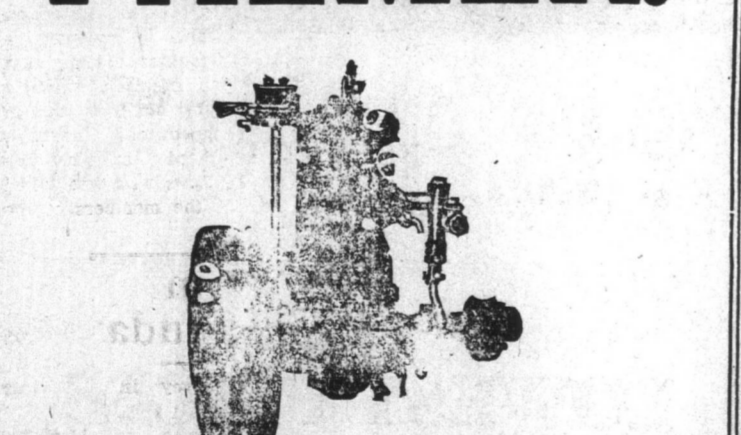

The Kaiser is dethroned and in exile. The Crown Prince, if the report of his assassination be untrue, darts to show himself to a German crowd. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the scrap-iron chancellor, has been long in retirement, and will be fortunate if he is left there in peace. Not one of his cabinet colleagues of four years ago is in office, and probably more than half have fled the country. The infamous von Tirpitz, if he is still in Germany, must be trembling for his life. The Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, who signed the first decree of war, has gone. Count Sturgki, the Prime Minister of Austria when war was declared, was shot to death by a fellow-countryman. Count Tisza, the Prime Minister of Hungary at the time he addressed the brutal ultimatum to Serbia in July, 1914, dropped out of sight long ago. All the Ministers of State in the Austrian or Hungarian cabinets of July, 1914, or in the cabinet for common affairs, who have escaped death, are trying to escape the fires of revolution. The King of Bulgaria, who dragged his country into the war, is a fugitive, and the government which sanctioned his policy is no more. Mohammed V, the sultan when Turkey sold herself to Germany, is dead. Enver Bey, the Turkish War Minister, who was responsible for the alliance with Germany, has disappeared, and the government of the country is in new hands. The greatest judgment in history has been delivered.

Household Notes

When cross-etching long lines in one-color work the first half to each cross all the way along, then return.

If you wish to paint tinware, first rub the tin with pumice stone or sandpaper and apply a thin coat of varnish. A clean and satisfactory method of mending broken china is said to be to melt lump alum and use while hot. Delicious little patties can be made of pumpkin prepared as for regular pies. Dried fruits should be kept in a cool place while being soaked for cooking. Woolen stockings can be cut down for leggings for the small children when the feet are worn out.

Topical Church Windows.

One does not usually associate a church window with illustrations of a topical nature, but there are several to be found scattered about in different parts of the country.

In St. Michael's Church, Golders Green, there is a window connected with flying. This is a recently built church, so is perhaps not so surprising as it seems.

At Plimmer Church there is a topographical window. It is a memorial window to a churchwarden, and in the lower panels are some quite good recognizable pictures, one of Plimmer Church itself, and another of Geddington, in Northamptonshire, showing the Eleanor Cross that stands there.

Perhaps the most remarkable case in this connection is to be found at Stoke Poges Church which contains a "bicycle" window. This may, of course, be an attempt to show one of the other of the "visions," but the fact remains that it contains a bicycle. The remarkable thing about it is that the window was made as far back as the seventeenth century!

NIGHT COUGH

You know it! It begins with a tickling, irritating sensation in your throat. You cough to clear the throat. In a moment there it is again.

A minute's peace, then again you cough, and so on until you cough your throat sore, and by the time the cough is sufficiently allayed to permit you to sleep, you are thoroughly worn out. This kind of experience is particularly trying to old people.

Peps make this sort of thing quite unnecessary. Put a Peps pastille on your tongue and allow it to slowly dissolve. Healing fumes are then liberated, which mingle with the breath and are carried to the remotest parts of the air passages, and bring about the irritation and soothing the inflamed membranes, thus ending the cough and making sleep possible.

Peps are also sold for Bronchitis, Laryngitis, asthma, sore throat and cold. Try Peps at our expense. Send this advertisement and 1c stamp (for return postage), to Peps Co., Toronto, and receive FREE TRIAL PACKAGE. All dealers, etc. etc.
