A two-part Imp drama, featuring King Baggot and Arline Pretty.

Rather let a thousand guilty men go free than hang one innocen man," is a golden rule, but infrequently followed when vindictiveness is permitted to creep into a jury's judgments. Frequently, when a case is tried in the locality of the crime, the law fails of its object, for the reason nat local prejudice only too often precondemns the one to whom cirumstantial evidence points.

DRAKE—In loving memory of Mrs. Robert Drake and daughter, Frances Marie Drake, killed on the G. T. R. Gore crossing, February 21, 1912. Relentless death among us came, A bitter grief imparts. It took our dear ones from our home, But never from our hearts. They have entered the mansion of glory.

They have entered the mansion of glory,
Safe in the bosom of God,
Walking the highways of heaven,
Free where the ransomed have trod.
Some day our eyes shall see the faces,
we loved so well,
Some day our hands shall clasp, to never say farewell.
—Mother-in-Law and Grandmother.

DRAKE—In loving memory of Charles H. Drake, who was killed on the G.T. R. Gore crossing, on February 21, 1912. From our happy home and circle God has taken one we loved, He is borne from sin and sorrow To a nobler rest above.

n a near and silent graveyard,

Where the trees their branches

where the trees their branches wave.

Lies a loving son and brother,
In his cold and silent grave.
He bade no one his last farewell,
He waved his hand to none,
His spirit fled before we knew
That he from us had gone.
A brother kind, a son so dear,
A faithful friend when he was here,
