

Toads Bark Like Dogs.

A scientist visiting a Santo Domingo jungle heard what was apparently the bark of a dog high above him in the tree-tops. He found the animal was a tree toad.

ARMISTICE DAY SPIRIT MARKS CHARITY BALL

Red Coats of Officers' Dress Uniforms Mingle With Gay Gowns of the Ladies At Season's Biggest Dance.

HELD AT WINTER GARDENS.

The joy of the carnival spirit on Armistice Day in 1918 was re-schooled last evening at the armistice ball held in the Winter Gardens under the joint auspices of the Campbell Becher Chapter, I. O. D. E., and the Acadian Club.

The first large social function of the season, it was in occasion for smart new frocks, which played an effective part in the brilliant and colorful picture the ballroom presented, gayly decorated in red, white and blue.

The Reliable Jewellers.

supper room, where the tables were decked with baskets tied with red, white and blue bows. The color scheme was also carried out in the clever dance programs.

For the first time in London, a large illuminated crest of the I. O. D. E. took its place in the decoration scheme. The crest, in the red, white and blue colors of the flag, was placed directly in front of the orchestra platform and banked with greenery, while below appeared the name of the Campbell Becher Chapter on the ribbon, scroll.

Welcomed By Regent.

The guests were received by the regent of the chapter, Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, wearing a handsome gown of black sequin and velvet, with brilliant trimmings. She was assisted by the patronesses and the committee in charge. Among those who loaned their proms were Brig-Gen. W.B.M. King and the Hon. Mrs. Shuttleworth-King, the latter wearing an Egyptian gown of white georgette with blue arabesque embroidery, the design being carried out in fighting cocks; Sir Adam Beck, Mayor G. A. Wenige and Mrs. Wenige, governor in corn-colored canton crepe with amber sequin trimmings; Mrs. A. V. Becher; Mr. Allan McLean and Mrs. McLean, wearing a smart gown of geranium color and embroidered in crystals; Mr. Frank White, M.P., and Mrs. White, and Col. William Garshore and Mrs. Garshore.

An irresistible program of dance music was provided by Lombardo's Orchestra, and after the first half of the program had been enjoyed, a tempting sit-down supper was served.

The Campbell Becher committee included Mrs. George Stevenson, Mrs. Gordon Keenleyside, Mrs. Gordon Edgecombe, Mrs. R. J. Winn, Mrs. O. I. Cunningham, Mrs. Bert Hookway, Mrs. Arthur Keene, Mrs. Atkins, Mrs. Harry Bell, Mrs. Sydney Horne, and the members of the Acadian Club committee were Messrs. W. Bryant, D. Davidson, D. Logan, R. L. Hay, D. C. Hunt, F. J. Walker, K. C. Greene, C. H. Thorn, H. F. Sangster and J. Murray.

Among those noticed at the dance were Miss Marion Beck, in a lovely gown of mauve crepe de chine, simply made with lace about the hem and belt of emerald green and diamonds; Mr. Horace Beck of Toronto; Col. Lawless; Miss Lorna McGillivray in a gown of sapphire blue with gold and green and blue and white and gold butterflies on the bodice and a fan to match; Miss Evelyn Adams; Miss Muriel Graham; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Greene, in a gown of green and steel cloth and black velvet; Miss Helen Kelly of Hamilton, Dr. and Mrs. D. H. Arnott, the latter wearing a gown of blue and gold; Miss Margaret Lobsinger of Kitchener; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hayman; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Waller; Mr. and Mrs. William Gough, wearing a sand shade georgette with steel trimmings; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Shuttleworth, gowned in old rose georgette beaded with cut steel; Miss Jean Macfie; Miss Shirley Johnston, in coral shade, embroidered with pearls and crystals; Miss Maybell Shaw, in flame shade and sequins; Dr. Jerret; Mr. and Mrs. Dean Russell, gowned in rose sequins with gold slippers; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bracken, Mrs. Bracken in black velvet with jet trimmings, and their guest, Mrs. Marion Wylie of Camlachie in a lovely blue gown; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gordon, Mrs. Gordon, gowned in black velvet with jet trimmings; Mr. and Mrs. Kent Campbell; Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Glasford, the latter gowned in turquoise blue, panne velvet, with silver lace and pearl ornaments; Miss Cecile McLurg, wearing black satin with blue sequin trimmings; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hertler; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin; Mr. and Mrs. Eardie Knowles; Mr. and Mrs. R. Leo Watson; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wilson; Miss Kaine; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Atkins; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Purdon; Dr. John Blair and Dr. Kenneth Berry.

Other Guests.

Dr. and Mrs. W. J. McLean, Mrs. McLean, gowned in American Beauty cut velvet, caught with jet ornaments; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marley; Mr. and Mrs. Neal Stryker; Miss Lillian Johnson, gowned in old gold combined with blue; Mrs. W. A. Murphy; Miss Leone Murphy; Miss Marguerite Mills of Montclair, N. J.; Dr. Callaghan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bennett; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Murphy; Mrs. George Stevenson; Mrs. Gordon Keenleyside, Mrs. Gordon Edgecombe, Mrs. R. J. Winn, Mrs. O. I. Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Can a Husband Force His Wife to Obey Him?—The Woman Who Is Married to a Human Cash Register. Social Standing Versus Love.

Dear Miss Dix—I want to ask you three questions. Can a husband compel his wife not to use rouge and powder, which he hates? Second—Can a husband prevent his wife from going three times a week to a moving-picture show when he has forbidden her to go at all?

Third—How can a husband stop his wife from nagging him about giving her fine clothes, which he cannot give her as he earns $25 a week?

RUDOLPH.

Answer:

There is no way you can make your wife obey you, Rudolph, except by moral suasion. If she will not do what you want her to do because she loves you, and wants to please you, you can't make her do it by force.

Perhaps you are wrong in your point of view, anyway. It seems to me that a man whose wife has got no worse faults than using rouge and going to the movies has driven a capital prize in the matrimonial lottery. He has a reason that your wife uses rouge because she wants to enhance her good looks, and make herself more attractive in your eyes.

Do you know the old story about the man who, when his wife came downstairs with a lovely hand-made complexion, said: "Madam, go upstairs and wash that rouge off your face." The obedient wife did so, and returned. The husband gave one look at her and then said: "Madam, go upstairs and put on twice as much rouge as you had on before." There's a nice moral in that story, Rudolph. Think it over.

As for your wife going to the movies three times a week, that is a virtue, not a vice. Any woman in the world is more entertaining, more amiable, and more agreeable to live with, who goes to the movies, and the theatre, and gets some outside diversion, than is the one who stays put in the house, and who gets dull, and stupid, and nervous from lack of contact with the outside world.

To keep your wife from nagging you about the things you can't give her, you have only to make up for the things she lacks with love and tenderness. Make her know that you would give her the whole world if you could, and that it proves and proves you because you can't, and she will be satisfied. It is because they think that their husbands don't notice their sacrifices, and don't care whether they have things or not, that makes nice women out of ten dissatisfied.

It is easy enough to manage a wife, Rudolph, if you go about it diplomatically. But you can't drive 'em, and you can't make one obey you unless she wants to.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—My husband is a business man. His whole mind and heart are centered on his work. He never seems to enjoy home, wife, or babies—never wants to go to church, club, theatre, movies, or take any recreation at all. I am just as good to him as I know how to be, and he is just as good to me as I know how to be. He has no interest in us. Is there anything I can do about it, for I would love to have a husband instead of a cash register.

Answer:

I suppose a woman who has no more deadly rival than a husband's business ought to consider herself fortunate for she, at least, will not be called upon to endure a scandal and have her children taken from her. But that is small comfort to the wife who loves her man, and who wants his companionship, and to have somebody to play about with.

And there is no real help for the situation, because the man who is obsessed by his business to the exclusion of his family comes to be nothing but a gambler absorbed by the gambler's passion. He is sitting in at the biggest game in the world, playing for the highest stakes, watching his wits and his skill, and his luck, against the biggest men in his line, and nothing else really brings any thrill to his breast.

He neglects his wife. He neglects his children. And he tries to square his conscience by giving them the money that he has made, and that he does not know how to spend. That is the reason why rich men's children often turn out so badly, and why so many rich men's wives are so forlorn, and restless, and discontented.

There is no way to wean a man with the money-making mania away from his fleshpots. The only thing the wife can do is to fill her own life with interest, and try to be father and mother both to her half-orphaned children.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am twenty-four years old, and have a little money saved up and a good steady job. I have asked a girl whom I have been visiting for the last fifteen months, to be my wife. She said: "Yes," but her mother refuses to give her consent. The only reason she gives is that I do not belong to her social set. Furthermore, she has poisoned the girl's mind against marriage, and made her afraid to risk it. I love this girl, and can't give her up. How can I make her see things in a different light?

DISLIKED.

Just be patient. If the girl's mother has no better reason to oppose the marriage than that you do not know the people she knows, her opposition will not last long, and you can wear it down by your persistence.

Mothers haven't much chance to win out against Cupid. Besides, women are sentimental, and sooner or later they succumb to the romance of a love affair.

If the girl loves you, and her mother can give no real reason except prejudice for opposing the match, she will marry you anyhow, and if she doesn't love you enough to take a chance, you are fortunate not to get her. As for her being afraid of marriage, pooh! All girls are willing to risk that danger.

The Bird-Man Decides To Keep Little Danny Meadow Mouse

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Danny Meadow Mouse was very, very far indeed from the Green Meadows when he had last seen it. He didn't know this, but he knew he was in a strange place. The fact is, he was in the middle of a great, bare parade ground. As Danny looked about him there wasn't a stick or stone to be seen. There was nothing under which he could hide.

It was still bright daylight, and Danny ran back under the aeroplane. It was shady there and he didn't feel quite so frightened as he did out in the light. Several times Danny started to run across that great open place, but each time fear drove him back before he had gone more than a few feet. You see, he knew that if an enemy should see him he would have no chance at all.

After a while Danny realized that he was very, very hungry. He had eaten nothing since early that morning, for he had been too frightened to eat. Now he felt that he just had to have food. But as far as he could see there wasn't even a blade of grass. Then Danny remembered the feast he had had in that man-bird, the feast that had caused all his present trouble. There was still some of that food left. In fact, there was a whole sandwich.

He poked his head out to get another piece just as the aviator looked into the machine.

The aeroplane again. That sandwich was lying right where he had last seen it. Danny dragged it over close to the door of the tiny cupboard in which he had hidden during the strange, long ride. Then, with his head just out of the crack made by that slightly open little door he began to feast. With every mouthful he felt better. Never had food tasted so good. You see, for such a little fellow, Danny had been without food for a long time.

He was so busy stuffing himself that he didn't hear footsteps approaching. It was the aviator who had guided that machine there. He had come back to do some work on the man-bird. Danny had pulled the little piece of bread just inside the cupboard and had eaten it there. He didn't head out to get another piece until the aviator had

Victorian Order Nurse Finds Work for Mrs. Good

Calls Her In To Help When a Neighbor Contracts the "Flu."

Mrs. Good had just settled herself down to some sewing when the bell rang and on answering it she found the blue uniformed nurse with whom she had now become quite familiar since she had been helping her neighbor Mrs. Pearce.

"Good morning Mrs. Good, are you very busy?" was her salutation.

"You've been so kind with Mrs. Pearce and baby, I wonder if you would like to help a dear old couple who live just in the next block? It's number 259 and if you can come I'll go on now and leave you to follow. I have a lot to do this morning."

"I'd be glad to do anything I can," responded Mrs. Good and without more ado ran in to get her coat and hat, and after seeing to some things in the house, very soon followed the nurse to the address given her. Here she found her attending to an old lady who was in bed with a severe case of flu and Mrs. Good entered the house heard the nurse say:

"You had better go right to bed. A neighbor has very kindly offered to come and help, and if you want to save yourself from a bad attack the only thing to do is to go at once. Mrs. Good found that the words were addressed to the husband of the old lady. They were a devoted old pair and the husband had done everything he could for his wife before the nurse came. He was in no fit state, however, to be up, and after making him comfortable in bed the nurse gave minute directions to Mrs. Good about the nourishment and care of her patients and went off to another case, promising to return in three or four hours, as the old lady seemed very ill.

"I think I'll have to put you on my books as a 'Helper,'" said the nurse to Mrs. Good as she was preparing to leave after her second visit to the old lady and her husband. "Nothing I'd like better," she answered, "but I wish you would find time to come in and tell my husband and me all about your work. I've been telling him about Mrs. Pearce and he will be awfully interested to hear about these dear old people. From the little we've seen of the V. O. N. work it seems to us such a splendid thing and we'd like to know more about it."

"I'd be very glad indeed to tell you all I can," said the nurse, "and as soon as I can manage it, I will certainly go into your yard and see your band because the more people know about our work the better pleased we are, as we want to reach as many as we can."

FINE CONCERT GIVEN BY WINDSOR TEACHERS

Ryerson School Orchestra and Choir Give Early Evening Recital.

As a delightful conclusion to the Windsor teachers' visit to the city, a most enjoyable program was given at the Ryerson school in the early evening yesterday. Taking part in the musical numbers were the Ryerson String Orchestra, under the direction of David H. Carr, and the Ryerson School Choir, led by Miss Muriel Lancaster, both excellently trained ensembles. The program opened with "The Ambassador" march from Zameenik which was remarkably well done, when it was considered that the instruments were all in the hands of children. Nevill's "Like a Rose" was also played by this brilliant little company of musicians.

The choral work was exceptional. Every number had been learned faithfully and was executed with finish. The choir's program included "Land of the Lake and Mountain," "Drink To Me Only," with orchestra accompaniment, a charming number, "Whistle and Ho," "The Blackbird," "Swabian Lullaby" and "My Own Canadian Home." The Ryerson Girls' Octet carried out laurels in the singing of an old English song, "Be gone, Dull Care." The octet includes Olga Hunt, Helen Prince, Margaret Curtis, Elsie Vowing, Mary Sawyer, Amanda Brazier, Eunice Murray and Dorothy Abrey.

An interesting feature of the program was the wand drill by the cadets from the Ryerson Cadet Corps, under the direction of H. B. Galpin.

A brief address by Inspector J. E. Benson of Windsor was followed by the presentation of some of the most interesting scenes of "The Ryerson Experiment, 1923" under the direction of Miss Laura Cook. The Windsor teachers were much impressed by the clever representations of the children, who appeared in a variety of attractive costumes.

ENTERTAIN AT PARSONAGE.

Beachville, Nov. 9.—A pleasant social evening was spent at the Baptist parsonage on Thursday, in honor of Rev. Mr. Van Slyke and Mrs. Van Slyke.

The following took part in the program: Mrs. Van Slyke, Miss Helen Smith, Angus MacDonald, Mrs. C. Gorrie. The resident ministers were both unavoidably detained from being present. C. Gorrie of Woodstock, member of the Y-Bayer Minstrels, rendered an impromptu solo, and responded with an encore.

NEW METHOD OF REDUCING FAT

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess fat steadily and easily without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's usual life is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say economical, because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) can be obtained from any drugstore or mail order company. A box, which is a decided price, containing the tablets, is sold for $1.00. A box of 100 tablets, which is a decided price, containing the tablets, is sold for $1.00. A box of 100 tablets, which is a decided price, containing the tablets, is sold for $1.00.

The Brazilian government has recently acquired a new telescope which has two photographic cameras placed above the main tube. The vertical axis of the telescope revolves in ball bearings.
