DE LESSEPS DOWNFALL.

Under a Cloud Which has Broken his Heart.

Ferdinand de Lesseps, the promoter of the greatest engineering and industrial enterprise of the nineteenth century, the Suez Canal, who has been decorated by nearly all the monarchs of Europe, is to be tried before a common court of justice in his own native Paris for securing money fraudulent. Ferdinand de Lesseps, the promoter of and accomplishment. From the time of the bombardment of Barcelona in 1842, when he showed superb physical courage, until the Panama Canal he has been leader in whatever he has been concerned in. He has dared to attempt what achouse the strength kind of foods. We hope that the right time is not far distant, when every farmer will recognize the fact that too much corn is injurious and will feed all minimals enough of such foods as bran, oats, at etc., as will nourish the bony and muscular existence. has dared to attempt what other men considered folly. His first conception of the idea of the Suez Canal came with a visit to Said Pasha, the Egyptian Khedive, in 1854. On his return to Paris he published a document setting forth the project. The great engineers of the world laughed at him. Robert Stephenson, the English engineer, said the idea was worthy of a schoolboy. When de Lesseps heard of this he brought down his hand forcibly upon the table and remarked: "If Mr. Stephenson lives twenty and the project of the big fellows that require so long to mature. There is a "happy medium" between these.

The old man was equally sure that the Panama Canal would succeed. The Suez Canal has been a mine of money for its stockholders. The great Frenchman has cut one continent in two, Why not another? The idea was fascinating. The stock was readily accepted on the Bourse. This was spent and then other calls were made; and the French people responded liberally. They had implicit faith in the capability of M. de Lesseps to accomplish the undertaking. They paid in their money, but the only result was a demand for further

His draw from grass. The hog, like the sheep, is a natural scavenger for the farm. But this is not a good reason why either should not have plenty of wholesome food. It never pays to try to grow them merely on refuse. Hogs will manufacture meat from corn when it is fed in the right proportion, in a way that they can from nothing else. But its very richness sometimes clogs the system and so prevents the best results. Feed with care.—National Stockman.

The Care of Cattle

WHY EVERY FARMER SHOULD STUDY THE commandments numbered ten;
Thou shalt not steal—thou shalt not do a wrong;
Commit thou nothing criminal—that thy days on earth be long.
Honor thou thy father and thy mother, and desist cattle if we ever have them. Fifty years From evil thoughts from evil ways-all ago, those of us who are old enough to remember, the life of the cow was everything but desirable. Even in summer the pasture was apt to be utterly insufficient for the animal, because the pasture went year after year without having the slightest attention paid to it. In winter time there was any at all. Such "extravagance" as feeding grain was never thought of, and while the hay was poor the corn fodder was poorer. Anything in the shape of a bull was good enough for service, and if anybody wonders that the scrub is no better than she generally is, he would wonder that fire would burn a house down. The best ard-be a sot; we the eleventh commandment though breed of cattle in the world could not stand such treatment for a hundred years and be a whit better than the scrub is. We have never known a case in which a farmer, however careless he might have been in caring for common stock, did not take good care of thoroughbreds if he purchased them. One of the great uses of improved breeds of cattle-we always contended-is breeds of cattle—we always contended—is that they teach them to be more careful in their management of stock. People are the track of the public that they intend carrying on the Undertaking Business at Middleton, and have now in stock a varied and comprehensive line of not apt to pay a good price and then abuse it. But there is abuse of other that exposing it to the storms and starving it, and if AND ALL OTHER FURNISHINGS. we do not realize it we are in danger of going far wrong.
