

&c, were copied from a book of sermons by an English divine. This is not good. To preach another man's sermon shows a lack of moral sensibility. Can a man who uses another's sermon as his own have any moral sensibility at all? We hope so, and accordingly give the above as a warning.

AS intimated in our first issue the publication of five volumes of THE THEOLOGUE this session will entail considerably more expense than the publication of four as hitherto; and in order to square accounts we shall require to hear from every subscriber. Will those who have not yet remitted to the Financial Editor please do so at an early date?
