FRANCE

APPEARS to be still in a state of the greatest confusion. When the news of the transactions of the 10th. of August reached the army upon the frontiers, it excited the greatest consternation and alarm among the troops. It is said that M. La Fayette after an unsuccessful attempt to engage his whole army against the measures of the National Assembly, left the kingdom on the 19th, together with several of his officers. Another account adds that he and twelve officers were stopped and made prisoners at Liege, and that he is now confined in the castle of Antwerp, as a prisoner of war.

The Assembly have decreed that General Dillon has lost all public confidence.

Marshal Luckner

Has also fallen under the censure of the ruling party. It is said he has resigned his command, and is succeeded by General Kellerman.

The King and Royal Family

Are still confined in the Temple of the Palace of M. d'Artois; and upwards of two thousand men are said to be employed in fortifying it.

Lord Gower

The British Ambassador at Paris, being recalled upon the decree of the National Assembly suspending the King, could not at first obtain a passport. Some complaints had been lodged against him by the Assembly, for having been too free in granting passports to Frenchmen. But later accounts add that the affair was entirely settled, and his Lordship was expected in London about the latter end of August.
