GERMANS WILL BE OSTRACIZED FROM COMPETITION WITH THE ALLIES IN ATHLETIC EVENTS

English Sportsmen Practically Decide to Bar the Hun From Entering International Games After the War, Owing to Dishonorable Tactics in 'Battle-Teuton' Regarded as Too Unclean for Competition With Gentlemen.

LONDON, July 12.—Americans in London are keenly interested in the condition of Great Britain's sportsmen after the war. The recent decision to ostracize the Hun from international games has been a subject of much discussion. The English sportsmen, who are the most prominent in the world, have decided to bar the Hun from entering international games after the war, owing to the dishonorable tactics in "Battle-Teuton" which is regarded as too unclean for competition with gentlemen.

That no person of German birth or nationality is eligible for membership of this club, or to be introduced as a visitor, or to compete in any club competition, is a rule which has been adopted by the English sportsmen. The club who competes, whether in England or elsewhere, against a person of German birth or nationality forfeits his membership of this club.

Since 1915 the Dovercourt Club has conducted an active propaganda throughout Great Britain, and identical additions to their rules have been made by the rowing and yachting clubs and other branches of sport. The movement is obtaining adherents every week, and it is expected that it will, of course, be necessary to revise the conditions governing the Henley regatta, the cups, but that would be a small price to pay for making our sportsmen to honorable sportsmen (and women) only.

The feeling expressed by the Hurlingham and Dovercourt resolutions lies at the root of the attitude not only of Englishmen but of Frenchmen, and also of Americans in England, toward the Hun. He is a dishonorable opponent, and they have the same instincts in regard to him as they would have in the case of a man caught cheating at cards or deliberately "foul"ing" at soccer. The offense is in his blood and breeding, and naturally is just imitable, and it is expected that the lead of Hurlingham and Dovercourt will be generally followed by all sports clubs and associations throughout the British Empire.
