

MEMORIAL HELD IN CENTENARY

Second Service in City in Memory of Queen Alexandra

Various Ministers Take Part and Address is Given by Rev. Hugh Miller

The pall that hung over the city today seemed in keeping with the reverent spirit of mourning that marked the second public memorial service held here in respect for Queen Alexandra, mother of King George and grandmother of the Prince of Wales. The service was held in Centenary Church beginning at 11 o'clock.

This second memorial service was held under the direction of the Ministerial Association of the United Church. Centenary held a fair-sized congregation and in addition to the clergymen participating in the ceremony on the platform were several representatives of United and Baptist ministers. Representatives of the Common Council were also present.

Purple and black drappings across the organ front, at the pulpit and baptismal font struck that note of mourning to which the eyes respond while the choral and organ music was subdued and inspirational. In various parts of the auditorium representatives of community bodies and national organizations sat in special reservations. It was a representative gathering and included youths, maiden and young children with whom the solemn exercises will no doubt long remain a patriotic memory.

ADDRESS GIVEN Rev. Hugh Miller in his address to the assembled congregation spoke as follows:

"We have met under the shadow of death, a death that has caused universal sorrow. A nation is stricken and the civilized world mourns. There are many signs of the people's poignant grief. Above public buildings and business houses on land and sea, a nation's flag indicates a nation's grief. The commerce of an empire, the functions of government and the social life of the people feel death's temporary arrest, as loyal subjects pay a last tribute to one so eminent and so beloved. In the hearts of a people who were loved, there is sorrow real and deep. In places of worship, with bowed heads, solemn music and comforting truth, a nation gives a fitting tribute to the memory and worth of the late Queen Mother, Alexandra."

"There is mourning throughout the United Kingdom, in the colonies and the many islands and continents that constitute the great empire over which extends the sovereignty of our King. There is mourning, deep and sincere, in the homes of the eminent and rich, in the dwellings of the great and noble, in the cottages of the poor and lowly. All subjects, irrespective of station and attainment render sincere tribute to one, whose place was beyond reproach and whose memory will be revered for many years to come. Beyond the frontiers of the Empire there is grief, not only in the land of her birth but in the other European countries as well, her passing is marked with genuine feelings and touching tokens of sympathy. In the nation to the south, one hundred and ten million people, bearing homage to a different flag but sharing our ideals, there is sympathy for a neighbor sorely stricken. The words of an eminent American written on an occasion when the relations of the two countries were strained almost to the breaking point, express their sympathy today:

"We love the heart, if not the knee To England's Queen, God bless her."

WELCOME TO ENGLAND "Sixty two years ago, Princess Alexandra, daughter of the King of Denmark, set foot on English soil. She came as the betrothed of the Prince of Wales. Warm and sincere was the welcome extended to her by members of the royal household and all classes of subjects, fittingly expressed at the time in the words:

"O joy to the people and joy to the throne, Come to us, love us and make us your own; For Saxons or Danes or Normans we Teuton or Celt, or whatever we be, We are each all Dane in our welcome of thee, Alexandra."

"Hearty was the welcome and hearty was the response. Quietly and graciously she took her place and endeavored herself to her subjects abroad. Throughout those years, in private and public, as Princess, Queen and Queen Mother, she exemplified the finest traits of character and gave herself unreservedly to the welfare of the nation, and now the nation pays the highest tribute to her memory and character.

IN TIME OF WAR "On two occasions since she became a member of the royal household, has the Empire engaged in major wars, the South African and the great World War. During the first, she was Princess of Wales and the second, Queen Mother. On both occasions, free from

Seeks To Organize Industrial Advisory Board For Province

An important matter will be discussed Friday afternoon at a meeting of the Board of Trade rooms when A. D. Ganong, St. Stephen will place before the members of the Saint John Board a proposition for the formation of an industrial advisory board for the Province of New Brunswick. Mr. Ganong advocates the appointment of a board of three or four of the leading manufacturers of the province to whom manufacturers could take their problems and discuss them in confidence and who, out of their experience, would be able to help them. He will at the meeting ask the co-operation of the Saint John Board in the matter.

TAXI DRIVER SENT UP TO HIGHER COURT

George Fawcett Dealt With in Police Court—Bail is Fixed at $2,000

C. J. Melliday, counsel for George Fawcett, taxi-driver, accused of an indictable offense today moved for the dismissal of the case before Magistrate Henderson, basing his request on the ground that the section of the Criminal Code under which the charge was made does not specifically cover the case. He quoted an Ontario case in support of his contention. Also counsel remarked that the evidence of Jessie Henderson, basing his request on the prosecution and in such case was not admissible against his client.

His Honor had read the case cited and gave it as his opinion that it did not apply to the circumstances here and that the Criminal Code section in question was valid. The defendant was committed to trial. Counsel then made application for bail which was set at $2,000 in two sureties of $1,000 each.

REPAIRS TO VESSEL Temporary repairs have been made here to the tug steamer Connors Bros., which ran ashore at L-Tete last week and suffered considerable damage, and the vessel cleared this morning for Miramichi. Especially did the engine need repairs. It is probable that the repairs will take a week or ten days.

the exacting duties of a throne, she was at liberty to devote her services to a suffering people and worthily did she endeavor to all in need, as time and strength permitted. No more familiar figure was seen in hospital, convalescing home, workshop, orphanage, wherever there was suffering and want. Every call to promote the efficiency of the war, the comfort of the troops at home and abroad received her unwavering support. Especially did she engage her heart to the children. Her happiness was never so great, her sympathy so overflowing as when she passed from cot to cot, presenting gifts and radiating cheer.

"I pass to another phase of her life—the days of her affliction. She learned by suffering how to sympathize with the grief of her beloved husband, King Edward VII. As she passed from the throne, she found a balm for her wounds and an outlet for her grief in her ministry to others. During her widowhood she continued the same gracious personality, strengthening the bonds of empire and promoting the welfare of her former subjects.

BLESSED IN RULERS. "No king, ancient or modern, has been so blessed in his rulers as the Kingdom of Great Britain. It has become the custom of modern monarchs to be crowned heads, but not in the British Commonwealth where monarchy in its best type, spirit and tradition continues. One partly, no doubt to the legislation but largely to the personal qualities of our kings and queens, who never interjected their personal judgments into political issues, official messages of condolence were received by the government. To the widow there came a message from England's Queen Mother, a message from a widow to a widow, touching not only the heart of the widowed wife but also touching the heart of a bereaved nation. Such fitting messages from our Majesties to their subjects, loved at home, revered abroad.

The thoughts of all such gatherings lead us to Westminster, and in spirit we participate in the solemn and touching service and pay our humble tribute to the memory of our beloved Queen Mother. When we pass out of this church and resume our tasks, may it be with grateful hearts that she was given to us, and may her memory be cherished throughout the Empire and beyond.

"Now she is no more. A lowered flag speaks of death, and the royal badge of mourning reminds us that our Queen Mother has passed to her reward. Dead but still living—living in the hearts of a sorrow-stricken people, living in memory and in deed. Mortality has put on immortality. "For all the boundless universe is life—there are no dead."
