

New Dry Dock's First Customer

Above is shown the Norwegian steamer M. H. Kongsbaven, which was badly damaged when she ran on the southwest ledge of Briar Island last week. She is now lying in the Market Slip and will be towed into the new dry dock today, the first ship to be repaired at the plant which will be formally opened this afternoon by His Excellency, Baron Byng of Vimy, Governor-General of Canada. Insert shows Captain John Palander, skipper of the Kongsbaven.

DRY DOCKS OF OTHERS OF THE WORLD'S PORTS

The opening of a dry dock in St. John (extreme length 1,225 feet) naturally arouses an interest in dry docks in general, and it may be worth while to give some information about those in other ports. From Lloyd's Register is quoted the following list of those having a length of 800 feet or more—

Table listing dry docks in various ports with their lengths. Includes entries for Boston, Quebec, Victoria, Port Natal, Liverpool, San Francisco, Bombay, Philadelphia, Havre, Philadelphia, Birkenhead, Southampton, Glasgow, Bremerhaven, Barry, Belfast, Sydney, Newport News, Talcahuano, and others.

This does not take account of government docks in a number of ports. It is also to be noted that some ports have quite a number of dry docks. For example, among British home ports London has 27, ranging from 161 to 750 feet in length; South Shields, 19, from 186 to 630 feet; and North Shields, 6, from 160 to 650 feet.

Among foreign ports Antwerp has 11, from 131 to 650 feet; Copenhagen, six, from 316 to 610 feet; Haver, six, from 190 to 974 feet; Marseilles, five, from 280 to 486 feet; Bremerhaven, seven, from 146 to 870 feet; Wilhelmshaven, six, from 377 to 620 feet. Such ports as Hamburg, Amsterdam and Rotterdam have a large number of floating docks. In South America there are dry docks at Bahia Blanca, Buenos

WIND JAMMERS DROPPING BELOW HORIZON OF TIME

Stately Sailing Ships of Other Days Fast Being Supplanted

SOME THAT REMAIN IN SAD CONDITION

Auxiliary Power Replaces Once Spreading Canvas, Says Writer.

Samuel Bradford writes in The Dolphin, the official organ of the Imperial Merchant Service guild as follows:—

They are slowly disappearing below the horizon of time, those stately ships, and the winds of modern exigency hasten fast the survivors from our view, yet it has been my lot during the last few months to meet with several of those that remain. Some, alas, were bound to their berths in Dead Man's Bay, whilst the others struggle yet awhile to keep abreast of the keen competition of modern times.

The Perim began life as the Radiant, a smart little full-rigged ship, but as I saw her loading coal for an Italian port, with her mizzen gallant gone and cut down to bark rig, whilst her rusty sides reflected themselves in the waters of the flowing tide, she certainly held the name of her younger days.

The last of the ships under the tricolor of Italy was the Blankenace, at one time a ship well known in the West Coast nitrate run. Built at Amsterdam in the late nineties, she was named the Nicholas Witsen, and later re-named Blankenace, she has spent most of her life under the German flag.

Four Frenchmen have also reached us for the breakers' yards, after lying for some time in the canal de Martinique, waiting in vain with many others for better times and freight. The Amiral Halgan and the General Foy were better turned out from the chandlers at Nantes 23 years back, and today they look as fine as the day they were launched, not a whit the worse for their battle with time and tide.

What a fine sight they must have been by a sea of velvet. Swathed by a canopy of the same Black Malines net and a right cockade of Monkey Fur.

Another metallic success just in—a poke crowned in Satin, stitched over in Black Silk Yarn and Silver lusting. Above the Steel Cloth trim curious ribbon appliques of Egyptian flowers and ancient turns of Blue, Red and Green.

To save them from copyists and retain their exclusiveness the special Spear Hats are only in the upstairs salon.

matas pointed nakedly to the blue sky. In the Edouard Bureau I found an old friend for, as the Wisconsin Park, she sailed for many a year under the forestall, top sails, and main 'gallant sails, she was homebound, 182 days out from Portland, Ore. She came here to be broken up, but as I write I learn she has been re-named Greif, and under the German flag will take the old sea-road again.

A Fine Ship. In the Passat one had a practical lesson of what the German still can do in the way of running ships in spite of the falling mark. A fine four-masted barque, some 12 years old, she is still in her prime, and equipped with every modern convenience, she was a picture to look at, and it was only pride of race that prevented me from hauling alongside for a thorough look around. Trim aloft and aloft, with gear of the very best, she is fitted with wireless, steered by a double-wheel over the big house placed amidships, and lighted below by electric lights. An example of what an up-to-date sailing ship can be, and like most 'P' boats able to make quick passages, and earn a dividend for her owners.

Lastly I will mention two of the old "bug-been" poor creatures whom utility has shorn of their white wings, and tapering spars, and made in their declining years into "hewers of wood

Auxiliary power now replaces the once spreading canvas, and the unnumbered decks are now cluttered with the gadgets necessary for quick discharge. I wonder if those who sailed in the little German barque Fulda out of Bremen, in the early eighties would have recognized in a little vessel with stump masts, bowsprit sawn off short and decks piled high with coals, above which peered a stumpy funnel, the once smart little ship in which they once sailed, whilst her companion the Rendel as a fellow odler, with no trace of her barque-rig remaining, held station with her, sad memories of by-gone days.

CRIME NOT FURNITURE. HIS LINE, COURT IS TOLD IN PHONE MIX-UP. New York, Oct. 28.—Sylvester Brier-ton, a member of the detective division at police headquarters, asked Supreme Court Justice Van Sicken, in Brooklyn to protect him in the use of his home telephone number, which is "South 1943." He says the same number is used on the stationery of a furniture dealer, Charles L. Pinner, 116 Fifth Avenue. Albert Conway, attorney, said that the detective and his family were annoyed by calls from customers of Pinner, sometimes late at night.

Pinner's reply was that the telephone company had switched the numbers. Conway suggested that the Court issue an injunction against Pinner, who offered to remedy the situation. Decision was reserved and the attorneys ordered to submit briefs.

Sterilized. Another thing—all Wet Wash at the New System Laundry is sterilized. What a difference that means, to have your clothes not merely cleaned better, but made germ-free.

And No Rubbing. The life of your clothes is guarded again by a process that does away with rubbing and yet whitens and sweetens beyond all power of rubbing. Everybody admits that about New System laundering. Eight sudsing and rinsing waters, your wash apart from others, and separate treatment for the Whites, the Blacks and the colors.
