Does Newfoundland, with all her other troubles, face the disagreeable prospect of having to meet with German competition in the Oporto market?

That is the question which is prompting itself to the minds of Water Street Traders, posted up this morning, announce that over two thousand—2,858

Newfoundland Seriously Disturbed Over Reports from Oporto—Norwegian Fish?

REPORT GERMANY
IN FISH MARKET

Can this country face German competition, if it really comes? There is one feature about it which is worth examining—exchange. The German mark is now worth half a cent—outside Germany that is. Inside Germany a mark is worth a mark. Suppose Germany next year sold a lot of fish to Portugal, at ten dollars. That would be 2,000 marks Co-operative would pay 2,000 marks outside Germany is about $10. Inside Germany it is 2,000 marks—a nice sum for Germany to get for fish!

We must keep our eyes on this
"German" fish.

Was it caught by Norwegians and shipped by German ships manned by German sailors, to avoid paying the tax?

Recent London sales show an improvement in crossbreds and low wools and there has been quite a movement in low medium wools in the United States recently.

Average prices prevailing in this market for graded wool run as follows: Course, 9 to 11 cents; low staple, 12 to 14 1/2 cents; medium staple, 17 to 19 cents; fine medium staple, 18 to 20 cents; the variation in price depending on character, quality and shrinkage of the wools.

"We are forwarding shipments of seven different lots of wool early next week to London, England," continues the report, "to test out that market as to price and also to convince the English trade of some extent of the class and character of the wool grown in Canada.
At present the wools most salable in England, we believe, can also be placed in Canada, while for the lower grades the market the world over is somewhat uncertain owing to the large stocks in hand. In this class of wools, however, some improvement is looked for in the near future, as is intimated above."

Expect U. S. Demand.

"Our American representative under recent date advises us as follows: "The present tariff which we have is absolutely prohibitive on wools, and, as our Canadians are all busy, excepting the ones making ladies' dress goods, we have quite

Fine Wool in Demand.

The most marketable wools at present are the fine and fine medium wools. This has been the case for some time past, although there is, at last, a really growing tendency on the part of the mills to use and to show more interest in the lower grades. Medium wools are already in fair demand. It is the opinion of the Co-operative that, as competition between mills becomes keener for business, coupled with the depression caused by lack of buying by the public generally, manufacturers will gradually be seeking lines of goods made of the cheaper wools, such as these lower grades.
The spread in price between the fine wools and low wools is still very marked and in addition there is beginning to be a decided shortage in the fine wools.
