OUR SCHOOLS AND THOSE ELSEWHERE

Desired, as reached—artisans who had left off school too soon and who wished to get an insight into the theory and fine points of their craft. Men as old as forty attended on each of the four nights a week and followed painstakingly the course in mechanical drawing and house construction, which was prescribed. The work will be continued next winter, but again the lack of adequate facilities reduces the benefit that might be conferred. The assembly hall where the sessions are held is poorly lighted and renders good work difficult. More instructors, too, are needed, and in view of the good work which can be done, it is felt they should be provided at any cost.

It is an interesting fact that in Vancouver, a city three times as large as St. John, there is a similar school in operation attended by more than 1,200 students, who are instructed by forty-four teachers. We have made a start here, but it is well to keep Vancouver's record in mind before we pride ourselves too highly on our own venture.

Music and Drawing

Music and drawing are two other subjects which are receiving a great deal of justified attention in other cities. Specialists are provided who give their whole time to the work. The importance of the subjects is recognized by those in charge of the schools here, but more prominence has not been given to advocating the employment of special instructors because such a step would require an outlay of money for which there is a more pressing need. Other cities, whose people are actuated by utilitarian motives, report very beneficial results from instruction in art, but as yet no educational note has ventured to suggest the adoption of such a course here.

Cost of Buildings Elsewhere

When the King Edward school was built last year at a cost of $60,000, there was a great deal of adverse comment from different quarters on the so-called extravagance. It might be well to note a few of the same devoted to sites and buildings in other cities before a final judgment was passed as to the degree of extravagance thus displayed. No fewer than four schools have been built in Vancouver during the last year at a cost ranging from $65,000 to $78,000; one building cost $150,000; two sites $185,000, while Victoria, a city very little larger than St. John, erected a high school last year which took $400,000.

Amherst, N. S., spent as much as St. John on its latest school, while Campbellton's cost nearly as much. Such sums of money, spent willingly as the reports show, manifest very clearly that the rate-payers in these cities appreciate the value of the work upon which the money is being expended. The size of the rate-payers in these cities appreciate to the uninitiated citizen of St. John to be nothing short of appalling. Plots of ground an acre, sometimes two acres in area, are secured for each new building and when we consider that they are situated in the central section of western cities, the price paid need not be mentioned. It is felt to be necessary to secure such extensive sites from the standpoint of utility as well as of beauty. Large athletic fields are arranged in connection with the schools and facilities are provided for tennis, football and other games.

Money Can Overcome Them.

The outstanding differences between schools of other Canadian cities which are most progressive in matters of educational advancement and those of St. John are the result of full exchequers. As far as the type of scholastic work is concerned the St. John schools stand very high. If, then, they are to enjoy an excellent reputation in other features, admittedly important, it is felt to be necessary that the public be instructed in the importance of higher salaries, medical inspection and night school facilities so that the council may know there is a force of public opinion urging these matters.

DIES WHILE STANDING IN

BATH TUB IN HIS HOME

Kingston, Ont., July 19.—Standing upright in the bath tub with his wife giving him a sponge bath, Thomas Carlin, a marble cutter of Tweed, died.

Carlin, who had been in the west for some time, returned to Tweed recently because of ill health. He was in a very weak condition and yesterday he asked his wife to give him a sponge bath. He seemed to be as well as usual when the bath began, but the wife was suddenly struck with the extreme pallor of his face. She asked him to sit down and rest.

Carlin made no response and the woman looking at him closely, found that he was dead. He had died standing upright and remained in that position.
