The Work of Destruction of Delapidated Fiemises in Chinatown Being Carried on Daily.

Although it may not have become strikingly apparent to the citizens of Victoria the fact remains that the old rotten shacks that once were so promin ent in Chinatown will shortly be affairs of the past. Some time ago it became evident to the authorities that in the interests of the public health these even sores throughout the city, particularly in the Chinese quarter, where they were most in abundance, must be destroyed To Sanitary Inspector Wilson was allo ed the task of investigating the district and condemning the shacks that came under the ban of the law as being menaces to the public health, and he has succeeded admirably.

The old tumble-down structures on Fisguard, Cormorant and other streets in the vicinity with their nauseating contents and unsanitary arrangements were ordered destroyed and the flat was obeyed with marvellous dispatch. There were also other quarters of a more pretentious character which came under the eagle optic of the sanitary inspector. and although they could not be ordered destroyed, there was a wonderful transformation scene enacted within shortly after the inspector's visit, and something like cleanliness made its appearance within. The low ceilings were ordered to be taken down and the walls papered or white-washed. The Celestial occuwholesome respect for the law as reprederful alacrity and willingness they entered into the spirit of the general metamorphosis of their apartments. When this had been effected, there were none who expressed more pleasure at the comfort and convenience afforded by their changed surroundings than the occupants themselves, and utterances of welly good" were heard on all sides. Having dealt with the more imposing of the Chinese domiciles the inspector Six of the members of the buges for the uncleanliness of which flames performed the work completely and expeditiously.

Altogether since the crusade against shacks was inaugurated as many as fifty have been destroyed, and according to the inspector, as many more will inevitably follow. Yesterday T. J. Worthing ton, the energetic agent of the Porter estate ordered the destruction of six shacks belonging to the estate on Fisguard street, and the work commenced immediately, some of the occupants, however, remaining until the structures were falling about them before they left for more congenial quarters. Probably a more telling exemplification of uncleanliness and disregard of the ordinary requirements of the laws of health could not have been effected elsewhere than on the scene occasioned by the removal of The revealing and penetrating light of close quarters and the many "conven purities When the debris from this quarter i removed it is the intention to immediate ly commence excavations preparatory for the erection of a two-story brick build ing, which will contain four large stores. This will adjoin the other recently erected structure for the Porter estate, containing six stores, which will be ocupied in about a week.

The debris is removed to a vacant los and burned, a large quantity which had been prepared for the flames in the lot on Fisquard street being ignited last night in honor of the surrender of Pretoria to the British.

Yesterday, the old Chinese hospital, another den of filth, on Fisguard street, were six rooms in this old shack, which were so situated and arranged that no self-respecting Chinese invalid could ever expect to attain the period of convaleslet alone any marked degree of ence, let alone any marked degrated within its stifling precincts.

In almost every instance where the shacks have been destroyed in Chinatown, the owners have expressed their intention of replacing them with brick structures, and consequently that portion of the city will shortly assume a more posing appearance, and perhaps lose its identity as "slums."
