An elephant while stamping through the jungle one day quite unitentionally stepped upon a mother bird, crushing it to death. Hearing the cries of the little broad in the bushes near by, she sought out the nest and with a sympathetic sigh said: "Poor little things! I've been a mother myself. I'll keep you warm." And then she proceeded to sit upon the nest.—From George T. Lanigan's Fable. "The Kind Hearted She Elephant."

picture drawa. It must be admitted that it acts a new mark in this class of film production. This picture follows the story of M. Severin's pantomine as now being presented in the William Morris' vaudeville houses very closely. The figures are all of heroic size and the facial expression is shown off to remarkable advantage. The story opens in a Paristan cabaret, while in the pantomime it opens in a street. The other scenes are almost exactly like those of the pantomime. As a work of artistic photography the picture is noteworthy, and as a lacting memorial of the splendid acting of M. Severin it is invaluable."
