84.-CIIARADE,

My first is what unto us brings
Life and heat and motion,
Beneath its ray the whole world sings, A living breathing ocean.
From 'neath the lash of pretty mail. Or matron " violet-eyed,"
My next doth cast a loving shale
From beauty's peerless pride.
My whole does virify and bright The tender lolling flowets,
Whose colors charm the sense and sight, In Spring's perennial bowers.

> AMSEUENTS.

The second week of McDowell's Company at the Institute commenced with " A Celebrated Case" which drew good houses for three nights. On Thursday evening the Hall was literally packed to witness the initial performance of the new version of " 'ncle Tom's Cabin." The piece was cast to the full strength of the company with the addition of about forty or fifty colored Jubilee Singers, who have been practicing a fow days under the baton of Professor Washington, who deserves credit for the proficieacy to which they have attained in such a short time. Their different jubilee songs and plantation break downs were given in first-class style and welcomed with luud demonstrations of approbation.
The scenery, painted expressly for the play by Mr. Gill, was very pretty and creditable to the artist. The audience testified their approval by frequent bursts of applause.
I'ncle Tom by Mr. Thompson was a faithful represontation of the "poor old slave" both in make up and accent. Miss Clara Irving's Topsey was a capital portrayal of the elfinish little moke who was "so wicked." "Marks" found a fitting representative in Chas. Arnold whose comical re-marks kept the audience in good humor. Mr Iludson was very good as Phineas Fletcher, and if any one conld look more diabolically villianous than Harry Coulter as Legree we have yet to see him. Miss Ophelia by Mrs. Thompson, Eliza by Fanny Reeves, and Mr. St. Clair by E. A. McDowell, were all carefully assumed, but to our mind the star of the evening Was Little Jennie Lorne who charmed every one by her artless and winning manner, the correctness with which she read her lines and rare appreciation, for one so young, of the character she was portraying. Her acknowledgment of an enthusiastic encore was done with an ease and grace worthy of an old stage hand.
The piece was repeated last evening to a croud d he use and will be played at this afternoon's matinee and this evening.
On Monday evening the Manzelli Sisters and St. Felix Sisters will appear in their Character
Songs, Fairy Ballecs, and Spectacular Plays.
