

THICK BLOOD MEANS GOOD HEALTH

Also it Means Bright Eyes, Red Lips and Rosy Cheeks.

The lack of sufficient red, health-giving blood does not end merely in pale faces and listless eyes. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are the tired, languid, run-down folk who have no enjoyment in life. They have heart palpitation, headaches and backaches, no appetite, sometimes fainting spells, and always nervousness. Just a little more rich, red blood and these troubles vanish. To get this new, rich, red blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just the thing you need. That is why these pills have a world-wide reputation as a blood and nerve tonic. Among those who have proved the truth of these statements is Miss Annie M. Blonski, Woodbridge, Man., who writes: "I became very weak and nervous, had pains in my side and suffered from frequent sick headaches. I was hardly able to do about the house and would with a start at night, with my breathing violently. If I walked upstairs I would breathe and my heart would flutter rapidly. I used doctor's medicine but it did not do me any permanent good. Then I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them, and I can only say that they did wonders for me. I am now well and strong again and able to do all my work, and this is all due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I have recommended the pills to others who have taken them with equally good results."

You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Other People's Good-Byes.

To grasp and shake vigorously one another's necklaces before parting is etiquette in the South Sea Islands, where the men as well as the women wear these ornaments.

The Turks cross their hands on their breasts and bow. With the Fijians saying "good-bye" is quite a ceremony. Men and women carry red feathers, which they produce before parting and place in the form of a cross. The significance of this is that, although they must now tear themselves away from each other's presence, their paths having once crossed, their hearts will for ever be in union.

The Japanese way of bidding adieu is to flourish a slipper in the air. In certain South Sea Islands the method of expressing a farewell consists of clasping his sweetheart's ankles; while in Otaheite a man taking leave of a woman twists her skirt till it becomes like a piece of rope.

She Was the Limit.

No Halo.

The patient saleswoman brought out the patent hat. The customer seemed impressed, but her dotting husband spoke up with decision. "That hat does not become you, my angel."
The saleswoman showed another. "And that, certainly, is not worthy of you, my angel!"
"I fear we cannot suit your angel," said the saleswoman finally. "We have nothing in the way of a halo."

Fine Hunters From the Emerald Isle

Ireland is quickly being adapted to pursuits of peace. Agricultural fairs and stock shows are the order of the day, and recently Irish bred cows were announced among the finest in the world.

But there is another thing which is due to bring the little island to the attention of every country in the world where the thrill of the chase and the clarion call of the horn on still, cool countrysides in autumn have a place in the heart of the people.

When the trees are bare, days begin to get shorter and cooler, the ground is covered profusely with brown and russeted leaves, and an atmosphere of contentment seems to settle down. The hurried frenzy for summer sports is allowed to subside. There is a universal desire for "something different."

Hunting seems to be exactly the thing, and in Canada this sport is becoming more popular each succeeding year. Strong, powerful horses, known as Irish hunters, are being brought here for that purpose.

These horses are noted for their stamina, speed and coolness. Long slim bodies, wiry tapering legs, there is in them the heart of the hunter who never gives up.

Thomas Lawton, of Cork, has shipped four specially selected Irish horses recently, by the Canadian Pacific liner Metagama, the second shipment to Canada within the last few months. These horses were purchased by Hugh Wilson, of Oakville, Ontario, one of the largest importers in Canada.

It is understood that more orders are to be placed by Mr. Wilson and other Canadian importers in the near future.

Surnames and Their Origin

TAYLOR.

Variation—Parmentier. Racial Origin—English. Source—An Occupation.

Here are two family names which are the sole surviving forms generally met with in this country of a group which at one time embraced a great number of variations.

There are two sources for the name of Taylor, and one for that of Parmentier. Originally the name of Taylor was descriptive of the occupation of the person to whom it was applied, the calling being either that of the tailor or that of the "tassel," the latter word being now extinct, though strangely enough the industry, or rather, process in the textile industry which it represents, is carried on today by means of the same sort of thistle or burr from which the occupation took its name. The "tassel," "tassel" or "tassel" was used to scratch the surface of cloth in order to produce a nap. It is still used to-day, though machinery is used in the application.

But as family names developed the spellings of "Taylzer" and "Tassel" became confused with the many variations of Taylor, of which "Tayler," "Tayleur" and "Tallour" were examples.

The "Parmentier" was simply another name, of Norman origin, for the man who made clothes out of cloth, old spellings of which were "parmiter," "parmenter" and "parmitar."

There is a branch of the Clan Cameron of Scotland which uses the name of Taylor, but in the form "Mac-Man-tailleur" (descendants of the "tallor" from "Tallour-dubhna," tuaghe) (The Black Taylor of the Axe—17th century). This, of course, merely traces back to the English word.

O'KANE

Variations—Kane, Keane, Keane, Keen, Kyan, O'Kain, O'Kaine, O'Kane, O'Kanane, O'Kahaine, O'Kahan, O'Caen, O'Chane, O'Keane, Kane, Cain, Caine, Cahane, Cahaine, Gahan, Gethan.

Racial Origin—Irish. Source—Given Name.

It looks like an index to a whole encyclopedia of family names; but it is just one surname, in its many variations. There are few Irish clan names which have given rise to so many variations of spelling, and even pronunciation, when translated into English, as that of "O'Kathain."

Of all the Anglicized forms, probably the one that strikes the closest to the Gaelic pronunciation of "O'Kathain" is O'Kathane or O'Kathane. But the tendency of the English-trained tongue and throat is to slur, and since it is the second syllable of "Kathain" that is accented, most of the Anglicized versions simply slur out the first vowel sound and the aspirate, and make one syllable of it. Whether spelled with a "C" or a "K," or an "a" or an "al," the usual pronunciation is "kane" in English, though that of "keen" is not unusual; in which case, the spelling "ee" is used. As a matter of fact, however, this change of "kane" to "keen" is a development in English of comparatively modern times, and it was probably first pronounced in English as "kane."

The clan is an offshoot, an ancient one, of the O'Neills, of Tyrone, founded by a chieftain named "Cathain" (meaning "warrior") in the twelfth century.

Turn of the Hill.

What came up the hill with me Utterly and gladly gay? Laughing jocosely all the way— Was it then some mystic fey?

Tinkling as it came along In its heart the song of May, In its eyes the dawn of day Merry, merry all the way.

What came up the hill with me? When I reached the top it stayed, Still about me eerie played Like a rainbow was arrayed.

It is gone, this butterfly, As I turned the hill forsooth, Tell me, minds, I cry, "the truth"— "You have lost," the whisper—"Youth."

The Common Law.

The tree that never had to fight For sun and sky and air and light, That stood but in the open plain, And always got its share of rain, Never became a forest king, But lived and died a scrubby thing. The man who never had to toil, Who never had to win his share Of sun and sky and light and air, Never became a manly man, But lived and died as he began. Good timber does not grow in ease; The stronger wind, the tougher trees. The farther sky, the greater length. The more the storm, the more the strength; By sun and cold, by rain and snows, In tree or man good timber grows. Where thickest stands the forest growth We find the patriarchs of both, And they hold converse with the stars Whose broken branches show the scars. Of many winds and much of strife— This is the common law of life.

Truth and Tommy.

The youthful Thomas had been subjected to a strong lecture on the evils of telling untruths, and, strangely enough, he had for once taken it to heart. But unfortunately it had rather a drastic result.

Thomas, with his mother, had been paying a visit to a neighbor, and at the conclusion of the evening the lady of the house had held out her arms to the little boy and cooed:

"Don't you want to kiss me, Tommy?"

"No, I don't," said Tommy, stepping back.

"Don't you like me, dear?" came the second query.

"No," answered the boy quickly; "you're ugly—very ugly."

"Thomas!" moaned the boy's mother. "Aren't you ashamed?"

"Hang it all!" said the practical Tommy. "I got a lecture for not telling the truth yesterday, and I ain't going to run any risks to-day."

Keep Some Borax Handy.

Borax has many useful purposes. A teaspoonful put in the rinsing water when washing the hair makes it silky and bright, and also gets rid of dandruff. It is also a good moth powder—an antiseptic, too, for sinks, etc. It cleans glasswork, and especially those horrible narrow-necked carafes, also softens water.

It is an excellent silver cleaner. Stand the silver in hot water with two or three teaspoonfuls of borax for two hours, then rinse and wipe dry. It will, if added to boot polish or black-lead, improve the lustre greatly, and, of course, a teaspoonful added to the starch on washing days prevents the iron sticking and puts a beautiful gloss on collars and cuffs, etc.
