LOVE AND THE LAW

Heart Tragedy in Four Scenes

Replivin Suit Breaks up a Happy Home—Sequel to an Unusual Occurrence.

This is a tale of a once happy home all shoe to pieces; a house divided within itself in which the head of the family got it where the chicken got the axe; where the weaker part of the family, so-called through the chivalry of mankind, moved the community property of the train between the rising and setting of the sun, so that upon the return of her liege lord and master to his domicile in the evening from his day's labor he found instead of a delectable supper nothing but naked walls, the cupboard bare of even as much as a cold spud.

People about town have been whispering among themselves for several days concerning the troubles of a good fellow who has been an habitue of First avenue in various capacities since the summer of '98. His business has principally been that of a dispenser of liquid refreshments and he knows everyone worth knowing. What brought matters to a head was the notice that appeared in one of the papers of a marriage having taken place several days ago between her whom he thought his wife and for whom he had been providing for many years, and a well known man about town. Then came simultaneously the disappearance of a fat little bank account in which he was interested and also the furniture in the house on the corner of Church street and Eighth avenue that he and his quondam wife had formerly occupied. Then came a slow awakening, the expression of a real devilish opinion, the juggling of a nice bunch of cuss words and finally recourse to the courts.

Peter and Annie C. Lorentzen were married at Vancouver, Washington, in December, 1892, and have resided in Dawson for the past five years, having arrived in the land of gold with the stampede of '98. Peter has worked steadily and continuously ever since as a bartender and has earned large sums of money, a portion of which was deposited by the wife as agent for her husband in the Canadian Bank of Commerce in the joint names of each and subject to the check of either. So much is alleged in the statement of claim in an action brought by Lorentzen on the 23rd of the present month.

Things as far as the public knew went as happy as a marriage bell with the couple. In '99 the wife went outside on a visit to their old home in Oregon and during her absence Peter was one day given the heart disease by receiving from the clerk of the court of Clatsop county, Oregon, of which Astoria is the county seat, papers in a divorce case in which his wife was the plaintiff and he the defendant. As the mails in those days were not only slow but uncertain, Peter had no opportunity to defend the action. So things went on until three or four months later when Mrs. Lorentzen came back to Dawson. An understanding exists as to how had between them and their relations were resumed. A year or so later the wife took a trip to Nome, subsequently returning to Dawson and her own fireside where peace has reigned until the last week or two.

Now appears on the scene "L. R. Radcliffe, bon vivant and had fellow well met, who has been connected with the big companies for the past several years and is now in charge of one of the stores at Fortymile. Radcliffe is a handsome chap and was "beart whole and fancy free" until he met the fascinating woman. The presumption is that the tender feeling was reciprocated and as love laughs at locksmiths so does it at all other obstacles. At this point the denouement takes place as does also that indelible, inexplicable and mysterious thing known as woman's wit. How the desire of two hearts was to be consummated without a long tedious delay that would try the constancy of the most perfect god of goddess ever created in the mythological world was a mystery until it was explained that the ceremony could be performed at once. How that is at present not apparent, but it is certain that the minister was satisfied of there being no legal objection why the pair should not be married and be accordingly pronounced the words that joined them as one. And so another chapter was ended.

Shortly afterward Lorentzen went home to his supper and all that

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Richard L. "Waterfront" Brown Convicted

Of Stealing a Hat From Hershberg & Co. on Last Friday.

After one of the most sensational trials ever held in the police court of Dawson, a feature of which were the sarcastic side remarks and heated arguments entered into by the opposing counsel, Richard L. Brown, better known as "Waterfront" Brown, was convicted of the theft of a Stetson hat valued at $8 from the store of Hershberg & Co., the first avenue clothing dealers, this morning.

Attorney C. M. Woodworth conducted the case for the prosecution while Attorneys Hagel and Alkman were retained for the defense. The evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution was conclusive and positive while the witnesses examined for the defense were a little hazy as to their recollection of events which transpired at the time the offense occurred.

Mr. Jacob Klein, a salesman for the firm of Hershberg & Co. was the first witness called. He objected to kissing the Bible as it is not his religious belief and after considerable argument he was allowed to make an affirmation. His evidence was to the effect that on last Friday Brown came into the store stating that he wished to buy a hat. Witness responded to his request and asked if he wished a soft or stiff one. Accused was shown one which fitted him and with the remark, "this fits all right," he started to walk away. Witness called after him and said, "Dick, that hat don't go out unless it is paid for." Witness is working for a salary and his instructions are to get paid for goods before they leave the house. Something was said about Biggs paying for it, but he had asked J. L. Hershberg, junior member of the firm, about it and Mr. Hershberg replied that the hat was not to leave until the money had been received. Brown had again started out and again had been told not to go without paying for the hat. He had seen Brown enter the store after dinner. He had been told by Mr. Harry Hershberg to Mr. Brown's residence and had told him that he had better bring the hat back as there was trouble about it. After that he was standing by the door when Brown came along and accosted him. Harry Hershberg had then come to the door and said to Brown, "You stole that hat, and I will prosecute you for it." Other words passed between them but witness did not remember just the conversation.

Upon cross-examination the witness stated that there were in the store at the time Sammy Shuck had another salesman, Mr. J. L. Hershberg and Mr. Biggs and that Hurd, who came in with Mr. Brown but took no part in the conversation or transactions. Asked if Hurd had said "If Biggs won't pay I will," witness answered "No." No statement was made by Brown or Biggs to the effect that it was in settlement of a bet and that Biggs was responsible for the obligation. Something was said about the top of a hat being cut out and Brown had left a hat with no crown in the store. Biggs was very much intoxicated and both he and Hurd were not in a condition to be responsible for their actions.

J. L. Hershberg was the next witness and his evidence was corroborative of the previous witness. Brown came in and asked for a hat. Klein waited on him and when the latter asked whether he had a suit or not without being paid for, witness replied no, that it must be paid for. Brown had then gone out and witness had sent Sam Shuckland to find him but he had gone in some place and was not to be found. Brown had passed the store again about 6:30 and he had hailed him and following him had received a blow in the face. Upon a question put by the attorney Jake pugled to his right eye which still has the mark of his encounter with Brown's fist and remarked that it was very evident that he had been punched. Upon cross-examination witness stated that Biggs and Hurd had come in with Brown and stayed after he had left. All that he had heard Biggs say was, "What possible objection can I have with Brown?"

An Old Man.

New York, March 26.—Born in 1802, in this city, Isaac Price is celebrating today his 101st birthday. During his life Mr. Price has only once been outside the city limits, he has never ridden on a trolley car, and although he has crossed the East River many times, he has never seen over the Brooklyn bridge. He takes pride in his long life.

"I think it is due," he said "to the fact that I thoroughly masticate my food and that I have never drunk liquor or smoked. I have chewed tobacco, however, since I was a boy. I have always taken a full hour to each meal, sometimes more. If people nowadays would only take time to masticate their food properly there would not be so much trouble from indigestion and dyspepsia and they would live longer."

Col. Wilder Indicted.

Huntington, W. Va., April 11.—Col. W. V. Wilder, of New York, leading representative of the King syndicate, now suing in the federal court to recover 500,000 acres of valuable land in the two Virginias, was indicted here this afternoon for conspiracy, it being alleged that he paid a certain sum to witnesses to testify regarding certain boundary lines. Five hundred thousand acres, valued at $15,000,000, are involved. Col. Wilder gave bonds and will be given a hearing at the next term of court.
