ONTARIO'S POLITICAL LEADERS

(From The Globe, Jan. 25th)

The opposing leaders in the English lecture made their declarations of policy in concluding the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. It is in these contexts that the keen, insight, sound judgment, and statesmanlike grasp of the Opposition leader become most clearly apparent, and his incisive strength as a debater has a most telling effect. He was fully conscious of the seriousness of his words when emphasizing the loss of public confidence in the Attorney-General's Department and the pernicious influence of the easy escape of malfeasants.

The opposing policies as to technical education were brought into clear contrast, although Sir James urged the need of waiting for the finding of the commission. The fact that nothing is done for the children who at twelve, thirteen, or fourteen years of age must leave school for apprenticeships was condemned in the strongest terms by Hon. Mr. MacKay, being the continuation classes for these boys and girls would sustain their mental development, perfect them in their chosen work, and make them more useful members of society. This form of technical education would not provoke the antagonism of workmen suffering through competition for employment, and would not deprive children of the full benefit of mental training during their school years. The full persuasive effect of the Opposition leader's logic was felt in behalf of the class of children most in need of technical training.

In educational affairs, as in other important functions of Provincial government, he showed not only a thorough familiarity with administrative principles and details, but with the results of various lines of policy on the public directly affected. The closing of model schools and the great expense entailed on prospective teachers had produced a system not at all responsive to the needs of the Province. As a result it was impossible to obtain a supply of competent teachers. Turning to the complete omissions of the speech from the throne, Hon. Mr. MacKay dealt with the continued absence of any attempt to form a reforesting policy and the lack of a system of colonization for N.W. Ontario. The House was usually silent during the Opposition leader's address, but in the Province at large that such reviews of public affairs have lasting effect.

Sir James's vigorous and determined as usual, and happy in the general good fortune enjoyed by the Province. His continued tendency to revert to ancient political history suggested that, as was said of an American statesman, his future is mainly behind him. Being a Scotchman, he never been his specialty. When he said the Province got nothing and the Dominion much in taxation from immigrants he was innocent of the fact that they pay indirectly their share of the supplementary revenue tax on many corporations, and the scarcity value given to some of the assets of the Province by increases in population. Sir James denounced the three-fifths clause against Hon. Mr. MacKay's demand for the British system of majority rule, and dwelt on the favorable features of Provincial development with vigorous emphasis. The two speeches, comparatively brief, weighed the opposing leaders in the balance. Alike in sincerity, in courage, in determination, and in confidence, the Opposition leader shows clearly superior insight and understanding in comprehension of public needs, and in appreciation of the subservience of Governmental institutions to the people for whom they exist.

Course.

For cool courage the deed of a Bendigo gold miner named Davis would be hard to beat. He and two others were sinking a shaft, and after putting in two charges of blasting powder they ascended to the plat above. One of them, Allen, slipped as he came to the surface and fell to the bottom. Instantly Davis rushed down after him, disregarding the fact that the charges were due to explode. He had dragged Allen about five feet before the first shot came. The debris burstly was carried in the opposite direction. Then he struggled on again and managed to reach a comparatively safe place for the second explosion. The two were found little the worse for their closeness to the bursting mass of rock, but Allen's leg had been broken by the fall. The Victorian government has recommended that Davis be awarded the Prince Albert medal for gallantry.—Melbourne Cor. San Francisco Bulletin.

Schoolboy Suicides. Writing from Berlin, a correspondent of the Chicago News discussed the alarming number of child suicides in Germany. "Investigation proves that every week a schoolboy kills himself in Germany and that this average has been maintained for the last twenty-six years," says the correspondent. "Opinion is divided as to what blame rests upon home conditions, such as the harshness and ambition of parents, or upon the school management. A case is cited in which a father said to his son on the eve of an examination, 'If you don't bring me your certificate of promotion I will not speak to you again.' The boy went into the examination more dead than alive and luckily got his certificate, but one investigator asks, 'What if he hadn't?'"

Kangaroo Money For Australians. Sixpences and shillings displaying a kangaroo on one side are a probability of the early future. For a long time Australia has been clamoring for the right to coin silver, and the Imperial mint authorities have at last consented. Sir John Forrest, the commonwealth treasurer, says the London Globe will supervise the new departure, and he says it is likely the coins will have a kangaroo on one side.

A SHIP IN A STORM.

The Peril When Wind and Water Rage in Opposite Directions.

In a storm at sea, with a gale blowing in one direction and the sea running in the opposite direction, it takes a staunch ship to stand the water pressure on one side and the contrary wind pressure on the other.

Stability is one of the greatest problems to the constructor of a steamship. Naturally the center of gravity should be low. The hull must be of such a form that when the vessel rolls to one side the center of buoyancy shall move sufficiently far to that same side for the forces of buoyancy acting upward to right the vessel.

A badly designed ship is liable to many dangers. If light in the stern the screw may come out of the water, rudder and be snapped off. If too low in the stern when running before a storm breaking waves may fall on board and so tend to swamp the vessel. A ship may be topheavy; there comes a moment when the upward force of buoyancy no longer tends to right the ship, but instead exerts its force in pushing the ship still farther out of perpendicular, with the result that she capsizes.—New York World.

THE SILKWORM.

But For Man's Aid the Domesticated Insect Would Be Extinct.

A peculiar fact about the silkworm is that it is actually a domesticated insect. Neither the animals nor the fowls of the barnyard, remote as they are from the wild types, need so little restraint as this bombyx mori, which, prodigiously industrious though it be, has never been able to meet the world's demand for its spun product.

As a matter of fact, the silkworm has been so domesticated through the ages that it would become extinct now were it not for the aid of man. Born into slavery, the caterpillars crawl contentedly over the narrow territory of their feeding trays, and, though the moths have wings, they have lost all desire to fly. This slavery began in China more than 4,500 years ago.

Nevertheless all the world's silk does not come from the domesticated insect. A little of the supply is "wild silk." This is the product of various insects belonging to the larger family of saturniidae. Chief among them industrially is the Indian moth called Antheraea mylitta, the source of tussah silk.—Esper's Weekly.

Felt Safer in the Mine.

In an article in the Atlantic Monthly Joseph Husband describes a thorough examination of a coal mine in the middle West. The work was discontinued for the time, and the miners were obliged to stay "on top" for a number of days. So great was the interest taken by the men in this work of examination that there was little complaining. One morning, however, as I walked back from the power house to the town I met Luke Davis, an old miner of about sixty, who came limping down the street toward the mine, and from him I heard the first complaint of the kind, and many like it followed, that I had yet encountered.

"The air on top ain't fit to live in," he said. "One day it's cold; next day it's hot. I've had rheumatism ever since the mine shut down. The only place a man keeps his health is underground." There were many others who shared his views.

Future of Lake Geneva.

The lake of Geneva, lying in the deep valley between the Alps and the Jura mountains, performs a remarkable work for the benefit of man. During the summer its waters store up a great quantity of heat, which is slowly radiated by the air in the course of the following autumn. Thus the freezing currents descending from the snow topped mountains around are warmed and tempered, and the atmosphere along the shores of the lake is maintained at a moderate temperature. But the remote descendants of the present inhabitants will experience quite a different state of affairs, for it is estimated that in 64,000 years the river Rhone will have turned the lake into a broad plain by means of the soil it is constantly carrying down from the mountains.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Templars.

The order of the Templars was organized about the year 1118 for the purpose of protecting pilgrims on their way to the Holy Land and back. The founder of the order is supposed to have been Baldwin II, king of Jerusalem. For a long time the Templars was the most highly honored organization in Europe, but jealousy on the part of the sovereigns, coupled with their desire to get hold of the great wealth of the order, which finally placed a different state of affairs, for it is estimated that in 64,000 years the river Rhone will have turned the lake into a broad plain by means of the soil it is constantly carrying down from the mountains.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Real News.

"Why do you waste so much space on these interviews with politicians?" demanded the merchant.
"They are of interest to the people," answered the reporter.
"Shucks! If you interviewed me I could tell you where bargains are to be had."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Reckless.

Uncle—My dear boy, it's a fact that the bacilli on paper money have caused many a death before now. Nephew—Well, uncle, you might let me have a few notes. I'm very tired of fire.—Fleegende Blatter.
