Queer Cases of Heredity.

DOCTORS disagree as to the influence of heredity. Some hold that a great deal hinges upon it; others believe the contrary. Some of the authentic stories told to exemplify this mysterious bond between ancestors and descendants are very curious.

There was a loan collection of old portraits exhibited in London lately and a young girl was among the visitors. She was an orphan and wealthy, but without near relatives, and was often heard to complain of the loneliness of her position. As she passed through the gallery one particular portrait attracted her attention and she went back to it more than once. Her companion saw in it nothing but the commonplace painting of a middle-aged man in the costume of the latter part of the last century. "It is such a nice kind face," said the girl, "I wish I had looked like that had he lived." As most of the pictures were ticketed the visitors had purchased no catalogue, but before going away, Miss B. bought one at the entrance and made a last visit to the portrait for which she had felt so strong an attraction. To her astonishment she found her own name opposite to the number and learned on inquiry that the original was one of her direct ancestors.

Another curious coincidence or psychological phenomenon happened a few years ago to a Southern statesman and financier whose family has always been of rank in his native State. This gentleman was overhauling old documents and letters which had been stored in a musty chest for years and intended to publish whatever might be of historic value and interest. Before he unfolded a letter written in low and time-stained, which was written in his own peculiar hand-writing, or seemed to have been written by him, although the date was unrecognizable, he found a letter which bore the name of his own, which was so markedly characteristic that he could scarcely believe his own hand did not pen the letter.

He who forgets his own friends means to follow after those of a higher degree is a snob.—Thackeray.

Deafness is Curable!

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of deaf persons are cured as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhazone are reported, and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhazone quickly restores lost hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. Foxall, of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhazone for a few days. Price $1. At Druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

In character, in manner, in style, in all things the supreme excellence is simplicity.—Longfellow.

$25,000.00 GIVEN AWAY.

In the past year Dr. R. V. Pierce has given away copies of his great work, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," at an expense to him of $25,000.00 exclusive of postage. This standard book on medicine and hygiene, contains 1008 pages and more than 700 illustrations. It treats of the greatest and gravest problems of human life in simple English, from a common sense point of view. It answers those questions of sex which linger unspoken upon the lips of youth and maiden. It is essentially a family book, and its advice in a moment of sudden illness or accident may be the means of saving a valuable life. This great work is sent absolutely free on receipt of stamps to defray the cost of mailing and customs. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper binding, or 50 stamps for cloth covers. Midsummer Maxims.

Old married folks never sit in the hammock together. A drug store in the neighborhood is always productive of thirst. It usually gets too cold for mamma and papa about the middle of the season. The home always jolies her brother's smoking tells her young man that she likes the odor of a good cigar—with the accent on the good.

The neighbor's piano ought really to be tuned. The man who can restrain his natural impulse to speculate the lawn who is home always jolies his next door neighbor, who can't. A woman can sit with nothing in her hands and rock, but a man has to have a paper or a cigar or both. When the lady and her neighbor get their feet on the railing side by side the young man who is calling on the Old Man's daughter usually proposes a stroll, for he knows they are planted until bedtime.—Ex.

French and German Duels.

It is announced from Berlin that on the invitation of Prince Lowenstein one hundred and forty representatives of the German nobility, for the most part the heads of old Roman Catholic families, have signed a declaration against dueling. The declaration sets forth that the usage, although it receives a passive encouragement, purely as a means of maintaining the military spirit, from the heads of the army, is clearly contrary to intelligence, religion, culture, and law, and to social and state order. The signatories bind themselves to work for its abolition, stating that it is false and unjust to qualify a man as a coward who refuses to fight, and they regard any man as worthy of all respect who, by conscientious scruples, ignores a challenge. In consideration of the present state of affairs, they reserve the right to demand satisfaction according to the old usage if honor is at stake, but at the same time ask that tribunals of honor be created, which would give a much more real satisfaction than that obtained on the so-called field of honor. Two recent French duels by the way, over which Paris has been laughing, concern two promising young sons of noble fathers. Leon Daudet was slightly wounded the opposite is a duel with swords with M. Gerault Richard, a writer on the "Petite Republique," as a result of a newspaper article which he wrote. This is not young Daudet's first duel. One of his most famous encounters was with M. Jean Charcot, son of the great physician of the Salpêtrière. That arose out of M. Daudet's "Les Mortels," a novel intended to satirize the medical profession in much the same way that his brilliant father, Alphonse, had made game of the Academy. In the other recent duel, M. Sarcey fils and Laurent Tailhade, a noted literary critic and book-reviewer, were the actors. M. Tailhade delivered himself of some very severe remarks on the beneficence of the late M. Sarcey on the contemporary stage. Young Sarcey, to avenge his father's memory, called out the critic, and the gray-headed writer and the hot-headed young man faced each other's pistols on one of the lawns of the Bois de Boulogne. M. Sarcey fired first and missed his adversary. M. Tailhade fired up in the trees, then taking his hat in his hand he went up to his young opponent. "I could not refuse you the satisfaction you demanded," he said, "for I seemed too highly the sentiments which made you act as you did. But a duel with me is no duel; I am one-eyed, one-armed. Now that I have stood your fire let me say how greatly I regret having wounded your fine feelings." And with this graceful speech M. Tailhade extended his hand and the quarrel was ended.

Holiday Reading.

Froude, in his "Sea Studies," had a word to say on the subject of books for holiday reading. While freely granting that the solitary side of our nature demands leisure for reflection upon subjects on which the dash and whirl of daily business forbid the intellect to fasten itself, he yet insisted that the mind cannot steadily itself by its single strength. So: "We require companions—both companions which intrude upon us only when we invite them; we require books, and the choice is a serious one. . . . As we grow old, the class of novels which we can read with interest rapidly diminishes. The love stories of the Fredericks and Dorotheas cease to be absorbing. . . . The taste for romance is the first to disappear. The taste for caricature lasts longer, but eventually follows. Truth alone permanently pleases." Therefore, maintained Froude, "the best company at sea are the immortals, those on whom the endurance of their works has set the seal of excellence; which are read from age to age, from era to era, and prove, by the tenacity of their hold, their correspondence with the humanity under which all changes remain the same."

A Child's Logic.

He was very young. To be precise, he was five years and seven months. As long as he could remember he had had a pet and a part of the money he received to educate the little children of China. He didn't love them as much as he should, or he would not have asked:

"Mother, they're killing all the Chinese children, aren't they?"

"Yes, isn't it dreadful? Are you not glad you are a little Chinese boy?"

"Yes. But when they get them all killed, I won't have to send them any more of my money, will I?"

A Man Who Knew It All.

The late Flavius Josephus Cook was long on faith and short on love. That about say, he lacked sweetness, generosity, sincerity—the qualities that win men's lasting confidence in a preacher. He carried an audience of non-thinkers by storm, but the scholars distrusted him, and when the people began to see through his "gallery plays," his hold upon the public loosened. For ten years he was the successful Boanerges of the "Monday Pop" lecture platform. The thundering champion of orthodoxy, he rode down science and discussed dogmatically, in "preludes," all things in heaven and earth, once a week, with advantage to his pocket and fame. As Barrett Wendell put it: "He said things with a bang."

Walking through the college yard with the present writer one day, Cook suddenly stopped, seized his astonished companion by the arm, glared at him and cried:

"Do you see that blade of grass? It is a miracle."

A ticket-collector on a railway got leave to go and get married, and was given a pass over the line. On the way back, he showed to the new collector his marriage certificate by mistake for his pass. The latter studied it carefully, and then said: "Eh, mon, you've got a ticket for a long, wearisome journey, but not on the Caledonian Railway."—Tit-Bits.
