A STORY WITH A MORAL

Recently a story appeared in the columns of this paper, which, in its appeal to the student of human character, is scarcely less forcible than the most potent of the moralistic legends. The theme and characters, while not by any means original, are deftly and originally handled. In fact the novelty of treatment gives the story distinction. There are three characters and we will deal with them separately. The first, important one—if we accept our own estimate of himself—is a very wealthy young man of gentility. He is wealthy in the form and complexion of the skin, smart and well-mannered, but of a sort of materialism. His first character in his life is his first love, whose character is very much of the same kind. He is a very rich young man, and we take it, is found in the same way. The second character is a young man, a student of the law, who is a very rich young man, and we take it, is found in the same way. The third character is a young man, a student of the law, who is a very rich young man, and we take it, is found in the same way.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe. If the cod fish were to be extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

Night Coughs

Keep the bowels open with one of Ayer's Pills at bedtime, just one.

begins to admire the splendid physique and capacity for work of the young man. While the rich young man keeps the bowels open with one of Ayer's Pills at bedtime, just one.

Under the influence of a full moon the rich young man goes to the service of the government. On the following day the unsuspecting rich young man is party to the formation of a government. Alas! Just as this ceremony is concluded a ship moves in sight and in answer to a flag of distress a boat is sent out to rescue a rescue of the three castaways. On the arm of the rich young man the woman greets the rescuers. The servant follows at a respectful distance with the luggage in each hand. It will not be difficult to imagine the state of his feelings. There is plenty of food for thought in this story and we should like to have seen it followed to its logical conclusion. It would be well for prospective bridegrooms to profit by the moral and contrive to be cast away on a lonely island in company with their fiancée and a handsome young man.

No less than forty two hunters met death in the state of Wisconsin during the game season which closed on Nov. 30. The deaths were due to carelessness. Wisconsin is evidently the state of careless people.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT.

"The darker the criminal, the lighter the punishment," writes a philosophic friend in commenting on our observations of last week on "crime and punishment." "I quite agree with you," he says, "that a man reared amid the influences of refinement and respectability should not receive the same punishment for a crime committed in a moment of weakness as that which is meted out to a hardened and habitual criminal. There should indeed be a very great distinction made."

Yes, and we believe the time is drawing near when such distinction will be made. It is not a question as to whether the punishment fits the crime, but a question as to whether the punishment fits the criminal. This, it seems to us should be the all important law governing the conduct of jurists. There are at the present time in the province of Ontario, three or four men under indictment for a serious offence. Previous to the disclosures which brought about their arrest they were citizens in good standing. Doubtless they have already suffered much. Will the province of Ontario or Canada in general be at all benefitted by these men undergoing lengthy terms of imprisonment? Again have these men violated an obligation to their fellow citizens which if any greater than that which, if disclosed, merely disqualifies a member of parliament and does not imprison?

Apologies of reciprocity between Canada and the United States, a conductor of the Boston elevated refused to accept a Canadian gold note from a fair Toronto passenger and addressed her in an extremely humiliating way. Again, six Sydney hotels refused to accept Prof. Graham Bell's colored val-t. Reciprocity! Ha, ha!
