

Petitions Of St. Augustine

Feast of St. Augustine, August 28.

Lord Jesus, make me know Thee,
Make me myself to know!
Be Thou my only longing,
Thou only here below.
May I, my vile self-hating,
Love Thee, do all for Thee;
May I be duly humbled,
And Thou exalted be.
I'll think of naught beside Thee;
Die to myself and live
For Thee, dear Lord! accepting Whatever Thou mayst give.
Myself I'll spurn and trample,
And follow close to Thee—
To follow Thee, to reach Thee,
My sole desire shall be.
Flying from self, O! let me
Fly far and fast to Thee,
That by Thine arm defended
I may deserve to be.
Fearful of my own weakness,
Thee let me fear, that I
May cease to fear forever
Mid Thy elect on high.
Distrusting self and placing
All trust, dear Lord, in Thee
For sake of Thee obedient.
Caring for naught but Thee.
Poor for Thy sake, O Jesus!
Look on me that I may
Love Thee, Lord, and serve Thee
More perfectly each day.
Call me and make me hear Thee!
O! call me to Thy breast!
To see Thee, and enjoy Thee,
And be forever blest.
—Rev. Matthew Russell, S. J.

In The Land Of Cortez.

(Concluded.)

Walking up the centre aisle with the aid of his lantern he found the secret slab. It soon yielded to a slight pressure. Then with a prayer on his lips, the first in many years, mounting the steps of the altar he opened the tabernacle. The veiled ciborium stood before him, but a great fear had taken possession of his soul. All his sins of pride and anger and hatred and ingratitude rose before him. Could his loud hands carry the body of his Lord?

He raised his eyes and his gaze fell upon the shadowy outline of the crucifix. That was what sin had done and before the sinner lay the crucified who alone could pardon and forgive. All was still about him, yet it seemed as though someone were speaking to him. He listened. The words were clear and distinct, unmistakable.

"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."
He fell on his knees and burning tears of repentance flowed down his sunken cheeks as he sobbed out a fervent Act of Contrition.

The clouds of sorrow were lifting and the happiness of former days returned. Reverently taking the Body of his Saviour, he bore it to its new resting place by Mary's side and the slab swung back into place. Turning to go, he remembered that it was the holy season of Christmas and today the feast of Saint John. Kneeling at the altar-rail before the crib he prayed to the Babe of Bethlehem and to Mary, his Mother, as in the days of his childhood.

The foolishness of his past life swept down upon him; worldly success and pride had blinded him to the sweet joys of his Catholic Faith; he had given up its practice and peace had gone out of his life. Now he was back at Bethlehem, the home of peace. His gentle mother's prayers had won the day. His head sank slowly forward upon the marble rail and his prayers slipped off into dreams of Jesus, Mary and Joseph.

When John rose from his knees the first streaks of dawn were falling through the richly-decorated windows. As he was turning to lock the door a voice called upon him to halt. Looking about he found himself face to face with a short, dirty, heavy-set Mexican. A few paces to the rear stood a small band of fierce, uncouth mountaineers and in their midst was Father Martinez. Armstrong at once took in the whole situation. The Padre was their prisoner and they were about to loot his church.

"What do you want?" asked Armstrong firmly.
"El Cordero Americano! We

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning that it is extremely dangerous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and depression.

"I was taken ill with kidney trouble, and came so weak I could scarcely get around. Took medicine without benefit, and finally decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the first bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and six bottles made me new woman. When my little girl was a baby, she could not keep anything on her stomach, and we gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla which cured her." Mrs. Thomas L. L., Wallaceburg, Ont.

will attend to you "in a minute," and the leader brushed by him into the church.

John was tempted to fire, but knowing this to be foolhardy he remained quiet. The Padre spoke to John in English, but a revolver levelled at his head bade him be silent. They waited without a word. John knew only too well the object of the Mexican's search. Yesterday he was weak, his faith had grown cold and he might have proved a coward, but today he was strong. There was almost a smile on his face when the robber returned in a rage.

The American pig has stolen them," he cried out, and pointed his revolver at John.

"I have stolen nothing," Armstrong replied calmly.

"You can't fool us that easily," replied one who appeared to be the leader, "Tell us where the sacred vessels are, young man, if you value your life."

"If I have deprived you of anything," Armstrong returned, "I will more than repay you," and he held out his pocketbook.

The young hand seized it.

"Now tell us where the gold is hidden."

"I am sorry I cannot oblige you, but I will gladly pay you whatever they are worth."

"You will tell us where they are and be quick about it," was the savage answer.

"I have told you I know nothing."

"For the last time I ask you where they are," and his hand was slowly raised.

"Have you no regard for the word of man or reverence for Almighty God?" Armstrong asked, and there was a tremor in his voice.

"I have given you fair warning. I have wasted more time than I intended or your life is worth. Answer me!"

In the next moment John's mind went back over his whole life. He saw his mother standing before him with tears in her eyes and a prayer upon her lips. He felt the trembling hand of Mary laid in his as they stood beneath the Cross and looked up into the face of their dying Saviour. He had proved himself an ingrate and the prodigal had been welcomed home. For his Mother, for the love of Mary, his heavenly Queen, for Jesus sake he would be true. There was courage, superhuman courage in that reply.

"Never! I can—"

But he never finished, for the brute was true to his word.

Father Martinez rushed forward and grasped the dying man in his arms. The revolver was raised again, but one of the bandits with the butt of his rifle struck it to the ground.

At the instant a sharp volley rang out from the roadway and several of the band fell forward on their faces. The robber returned the shots and for a brief interval the firing was kept up, the bullets whizzing over their heads, clipping the leaves and flattening against the walls of the church. The resistance was brief, and as the rebels turned and fled, a shout of triumph went up from the roadway. Bustamante was saved.

"O Father," gasped John, "how glad I am that you have come back. But listen, Father, before it is too late I must tell you all."

The friend laughed, but the girl was warning to her subject.

Once half a dozen of us girls camped for two weeks in the Green Mountains. Each girl had her own special work, and Etta took making beds. And the last day we were up there it came out that making beds was the work she especially loathed. It gave her a headache to stoop and while his life-blood was ebbing fast, he revealed to him in broken whispers, the secrets of his soul. "But Father, you will pardon me I know," he added faintly. "I am sorry for all I have done. Oh, forgive me!"

The words of absolution were spoken. Then quickly taking a little gold pyx from his breast, the Padre raised the Bread of Life in benediction. The bright, blue eyes of the dying man beamed with joyous expectation. Then for a few moments all was silent.

At last he opened his eyes again and began to speak distinctly, but with great effort. "Father," he said, "tell mother I did it for her, and for Mary and Jesus and you, Father. May God—"

But he could not continue. His lips moved in silence for a moment and then were quiet forever.

Thriftig, Are You?

By Edmund Vance Cooke

We think we are thrifting. But maybe we're drifting. And the coin that we elink is not saving but shifting. For seemingly spending Goes on without ending. And heedlessness still is the tend of our treading.

In gleaming my meaning, You'll find gasolining Is still used for dusting instead of for cleaning; And most of us batten On fare and fatten, While robbing our softness in purple and satin.

Oh, maybe you're guilty and maybe you're not, But ask: "Have I thrifted as much as I ought?"

Our thrifting is fickle, It runs in a trickle. We pickle a nickle to give us a tickle, Then ride on the trolleys To go to the Follies And hand ourselves thanks and a couple of jollies.

Man still goes on puffing, Imbibing and stuffing, And holding enough yet without "Hold! enough!"-ing. While woman still poses And shows us her hoses, All silken and sheer to excuse her disclosures.

At the end of the day, if you're feeling too good, Ask this: "Have I thrifted as much as I should?" (Copyright, 1918, N. E. A.)

Disagreeable Weakness

"If there is an uncomfortable chair in the room, trust Etta to find it."

The friend who did not know Etta looked a little puzzled. "You mean she's so self-sacrificing?" she suggested.

"No, I don't mean that," the answer came with decision. "I hardly know how to describe it. Perhaps you will think I'm a little uncharitable to say that Etta loves to play the martyr, but it really seems that way."

The friend looked interested and after a moment, the speaker went on:

"We went to a picnic once, at West Lake, and got caught in a shower on the way. But after it had cleared up we had our luncheon just as we had planned, and everybody was as gay as a lark, but Etta. She sat looking as if she were trying to have a good time, and at last some one suggested that she wasn't eating much. Etta said those wet sandwiches spoiled her appetite."

"Wet sandwiches?" the friend repeated in horror.

"Yes, wasn't it awful! It seems that during the shower it had rained into one of the baskets, and a number of the sandwiches got a good soaking. But of course we had plenty of dry ones, more than we could possibly eat as you always do at a picnic. But Etta had found the wet ones and had eaten enough to make her feel half-sick, and she never smiled again all that afternoon."

The friend laughed, but the girl was warning to her subject.

Once half a dozen of us girls camped for two weeks in the Green Mountains. Each girl had her own special work, and Etta took making beds. And the last day we were up there it came out that making beds was the work she especially loathed. It gave her a headache to stoop

ALL DRUGGISTS

SUMMER COMPLAINT IS DANGEROUS.

The Old and the Young, the Strong and the Weak, are all affected the same.

There is not a summer passes without thousands of people being attacked by Summer Complaint.

The prostration, often verging on collapse—which sometimes accompanies this disease makes it one of the most serious and dangerous we have to contend with during the hot months.

Very few people escape an attack of summer complaint. It may be slight, or it may be severe, but nearly everyone is liable to it.

You cannot tell, when it seizes you, how it may end.

Let it go for a day or two only, and see how weak and prostrate it will leave you.

There is only one safe way to cure it, and that is by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has been on the market for the past 22 years, and has been proved and tried. You do not experiment when you buy it.

Do not accept a substitute or imitation, as many of these may be positively dangerous to your health. Insist on having "Dr. Fowler's". It does not leave the bowels constipated.

Mrs. T. Haggerty, Algoma Mills, Ont., writes: "I must recommend you, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. When my little boy was a year and two months old he had a bad attack of summer complaint. I got the doctor and he gave him some medicine, and said if that wouldn't do him good he could do no more for him. I wrote to my aunt and told her I was going to lose my little boy. She sent me a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and I only gave him four doses when he was cured. It certainly saved my child's life."

over, she said. It seemed she would much rather have washed dishes, and the girls who had the dishes would have loved to change with her. That is what is so tiresome about Etta. She makes a martyr of herself without making anybody else happier or more comfortable.

"Yes, I know," said the friend, "Etta isn't the only one of her kind, my dear. Wherever you go you will find people with the same weakness—for needless martyrdom, a very disagreeable weakness."

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

TO MAKE GOOD BREAD

You must have Good Yeast

GOOD BREAD is, without question, the most important article of food in the catalog of man's diet; surely, it is the "staff of life." Good bread is obtainable only by using the Best Yeast, the best flour, and adopting the best method of combining the two. Compressed Yeast is in all respects the best commercial Yeast yet discovered, and Fleischmann's Yeast is indisputably the most successful and best known to the world. It is uniform in quality and strength. It saves time and labor, and relieves the housewife of the vexation and worryment she necessarily suffers from the use of an inferior or unreliable leaven. It is, moreover, a fact that with the use of Fleischmann's Yeast, more loaves of bread of the same weight can be produced from a given quantity of flour than can be produced with the use of any other kind of Yeast.

This is explained by the more thorough fermentation and expansion which the minute particles of flour undergo, thereby increasing the size of the mass and at the same time adding to the nutritive properties of the bread. This fact may be clearly and easily demonstrated by any who doubt that there is economy in using Fleischmann's Yeast.

If you have never used this Yeast give it a trial. Ask your Grocer for a "Fleischmann" Recipe Book.
