The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

My Dear Miss Cameron: I am a reader of this paper and have noticed with interest the different occupations for women you sometimes suggest in your columns. "Now, I would appreciate it very much if you would suggest a few ways in which a college girl can earn money during her summer vacation. I refer to a college girl who is trying as nearly as possible to earn her own way through college. What can you suggest in this line that would not bring her to the opening of the college year, tired out and unfit for the year's work?" "An early answer through the columns of the paper is greatly desired." "Again I am going to ask my readers' help. On the previous occasions when I have requested this I have found my readers most generous with their excellent suggestions, so I am sure they will be again. Last summer I happened to hear of two college girls who spent the summer as book agents in southern Canada. They went through every primitive country which had not been done to death by summer tourists, and were regarded by the country people as a most welcome diversion. Consequently, according to the reports which I got, they both had a delightful time and made very good money. Other college girls whom I have known have earned money during the summer by acting as governesses, as monitors at summer camps, as play teachers in summer playgrounds, as teachers in summer schools, as clerks in the civil service (the examination is the last of April, I think) or in ordinary offices. None of these things are very unique, so I am afraid I have not contributed much to the subject. And here, of course, is where I want my readers' help. If you know of any way in which a college or high school girl has earned money in the summer, won't you write and tell us about it? Through these columns I will pass your suggestion on, to this girl and to any others who may be desirous of similar information. Ruth Cameron

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles. Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the 'Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy. The most perfect remedy ever devised for weak and delicate women is Dr. Pierce's 'Favorite Prescription.' IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG. SICK WOMEN WELL. The many and varied symptoms of women's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed, 75c. on receipt of 50 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address as above.

Fads and Fashions.

Semi-rough woollens are used for the early spring suits. They are in two-toned effects, and not a few of the handsomest models are made of handloom homespun and tweeds. White shirts continue to be narrow in effect, they are really much wider, in some instances the extra width is introduced in the form of inverted plaits down the side and back. A novel belt to be worn with a high-waisted frock is of flowered ribbon in vivid tones edged at the top with a narrow band of fur and finished at the back with a big butterfly bow. A new skirt has a bit of novelty in a little overskirt that opens in front from the belt. It is pulled gracefully back and passed under the edges of a wide box plait in the middle of the back. The new trouser skirt is merely divided like a riding skirt, and this division is entirely hidden by a box plait that is stitched at its edges to the underskirt down the middle of back and front. The skirt, slashed front and back at the hem, and showing an inset piece of the material or of contrasting stuff, while not strictly new, is being used to some extent in the new dresses and suits. A unique headress is a bandeau of old lace almost the width of the head at the top and narrowed at each side above the ear to go under two round pearl ornaments about the size of an old-fashioned silver watch. In effect the new dresses presuppose a corsetless figure; in other words, the bust must not be rigidly confined and the hips must be flattened almost to a point of elimination. The waist line is not narrow, since small waists do not accord with classic lines. Bordered crepe de chine, bordered foulards, bordered shantung, as well as bordered voiles and grenadines, are among the dress materials for the spring. Add to these the plain satins and light-weight woollens and a good idea of the fashionable fabrics is gained. The Egyptian motifs show such designs as the beetle or scorpion, the rising sun, the cobra, the lotus, palm, papyrus buds and reeds, animals, fan-shaped ornaments, the ram, human figures, and so on. The colors show such combinations as black, yellow and red; red, blue and white; green and black; dark red, medium yellow and blue.

How the Animals See.

There is a most astonishing diversity among animals in respect to the number and location of their eyes. In mammals, birds, reptiles and fishes they are limited to two, and are invariably placed in the head; but others of the animal kingdom may have anywhere up to 50,000, and they seem to have been placed anywhere that seemed handy. The dragon fly possesses eyes composed of an aggregation of about 50,000 smaller eyes, and the common house fly has about 16,000, which may be seen by the aid of a magnifying glass of even small power. In spiders and scorpions there are usually eight or ten eyes in one or more clusters on the dorsal aspect of that part of the body which is formed by the union of the head and thorax. The starfish has an eye on the tip of each of its five rays or arms, and in the sea urchin, which is nothing but a star-fish with the ends of its rays drawn close together, the five eyes are gathered in a circle around what is considered the hinder portion of its body. The scallop has numerous eyes on the ledge of its mantle, extending from one end of the animal to the other, and forming a semi-circle. Some marine worms have eyes in clusters, not only the head, but also along each side of the body, even to the tip of the tail, and they are connected individually and directly with the median nervous cord. In the lowest forms we may find many 'intuitions' which have neither eyes nor nerves, but are nevertheless sensitive to light, either seeking or avoiding it. London, March 24.—E. McKay Edgar's motor boat, Maple Leaf III, showed a wonderful burst of speed in a trial on the Solent to-day, making 49 1/2 knots an hour. This is claimed as a world's record. The Maple Leaf III, took part in the motor boat regatta at Monaco a year ago. Mr. Edgar resides in Toronto.

French Sewing Woman's Story Thrill. Europe.

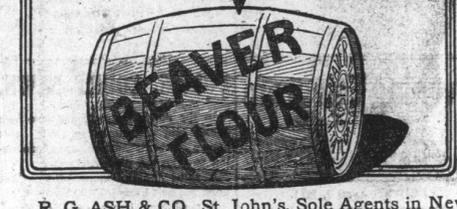

Paris, March 27.—The European literary world is still marvelling at the genius of the little French sewing woman, Marguerite Audoux, who as the result of about ten years' spare time work, wrote 'Marie Claire.' Not only has this story won the five thousand franc prize of the 'Academy of Women' and astonished the ablest critics of the world, but it has provided a new viewpoint. It enables the leisure class to see the life of working people through the sober vision of a worker, and incidentally conquers fresh territory for aspiring womanhood. The story of Marie Claire herself is as remarkable and improbable as any sensational novel, and gives fresh point to the old assertion that life is stranger than fiction. Losing her mother by death and her father by desertion, she became an inmate of a convent orphanage, until a home was provided for her with a Sologne farmer. Her education was of the poorest, and her experience too narrow to allow of her imagination being touched by the splendid facts of life. But she hungered for books, and while a shepherdess at Sologne she came to Paris to appease this craving. In Paris she became a needle woman, and read eagerly in her scanty leisure, but it was not until her cousin failed that she gave way to the ambition of writing a story herself. Marguerite Audoux was, however, ripe for the great effort. For five years she had been writing the book in her thoughts, while the actual work of composition occupied another five years, for through her defective schooling there were faults of spelling that could only be surmounted by the kindly offices of friends. Professional writers brought up in a bookish atmosphere, and titled scribblers who write for vanity's sake, are not a little disturbed to find a humble needle woman soaring at once to a big place in the literary firmament. Marguerite Audoux stands for the republican idea in fiction, and is proof of the growing consciousness of the inarticulate millions. Her lowly origin has not militated against her, however, or made a matter of scorn, as it was in the case of Keats. Indeed, her brave battle against the 'slings and arrows of outrageous fortune' has fostered tender regard for the plucky little woman who has knocked on the door of the academic theory that culture is a necessary condition for fine literary achievement. Looking at Marguerite Audoux you see the wistful dignity that is bred by endurance of a hard lot, without repining or protest, and the calm of conscious strength. The remarkable beauty of her eyes gives distinction to her face. Yet it is hard for the people who have met her to realize that she is the author of the work described by the famous French author, Octave Mirbeau, in the following terms: "When you have read it you will ask, without wishing to wound the sensibilities of any one, who among our writers—and I include those who have won the greatest glory—could have written this book with such flawless construction, such purity and such dazzling grandeur?"

The Court Courtesy.

Debutantes are already rehearsing for the forthcoming courts, and teachers of deportment in luxurious West End salons are busily engaged in putting pretty girls "through their paces" for these all important events. The rehearsals are not so exacting as in Queen Victoria's time, for the Georgian debutante will not have to face quite so formidable an ordeal. She will curtsy once to the King and once to the Queen, and then retire as gracefully as possible to the supper room. However, even this comparatively simple performance must be carried out to perfection. The minimum cost of a debutante's outfit is £20, but as a rule over £200 is expended, the heaviest items in the account being £105 for the gown and £20 for the cloak. An American bride has been known to spend as much as £1,700 on her court outfit, the gown costing £1,500.

BEAVER FLOUR

combines the rich gluten of Manitoba Spring wheat and the lighter, but equally important, properties of Ontario Fall wheat. The two combined form a perfectly blended flour that makes bread light, white, nutritious and extremely palatable; while pastry made with Beaver Flour has a crisp, flaky texture that brings many a compliment to the cook. You don't need to be an expert in baking to attain the best results with BEAVER FLOUR. But if you are an expert, you will readily recognize its incomparable qualities. Your grocer has BEAVER FLOUR, and will recommend it. DEALERS—Write for prices on all Feed, Cases, Grain and Cereals. THE T. H. TAYLOR CO. Limited, CHATHAM, Ont. 108
