A Gullible People.

Newfoundlanders take trangers and foreigners perhaps more so than any other ple on the face of the earth, and apparently and evidently it only needs to be some one or something not born in Newfoundland who receives all the privileges, all the honors and all the rewards that accrue for service to the country. Look over the list of titles that have been given for services well paid for by the people. With the personality of these men we have nothing to do. They are possibly good fellows in their way, but why we should depart from custom to load them with honors and rewards, which they could not obtain in their own lands, is more than the average citizen can quite comprehend.

There is any amount breathing and living space in Newfoundland for the class of person, attracted by the pecuniary rewards held out to them, but why in mercy's name should we go out of our way to 1 Ind them down with honors that they never deserved or never earned? The policy of past and present Governments is sickening. The foreigner, the alien, received all the good things in the gift' of various administrations; the native born could go either to the woods or the water to earn sufficient, not only to keep himself and family, but to contribute towards the supthat the Peter has lost none of the port of the drifters. And so it speed for which the boat was noted. cone on unprotested and undetected. We have all sorts more help than the sons of the them and help them get along by made to continue it. appointing them to all sorts of jobs in the gift of the Government. Some of them have been Trade Commissioners; others have been sent abroad to educate themselves at the expense of down-trødden Newfoundlanders, in order that they may come back and impose their of fish on Canadian Labrador; traps expensively acquired erudition on Newfoundland side getting ten to on those who are to come after fifteen qtls. daily; caplin plentiful." us. And it still goes on, and will until the people themselves take a hand in the game and clean out the whole army of dependents who are sucking, vam-pire-like, the financial life-blood from the people of this Island.

The latest foreigner to receive a commission on fishery matters, with an honorarium which we shall not know until next year, is one D. James Davies, Government Analyst, a man whose business it is to examine rocks and tell the submitters of such geological specimens, whether they contain any valuables or not. Also and furthermore it is part of his official duties to determine the proof strength of spirits, whether moonshine or validly imported, a science for which he studied and proved competent; but when this Government Analyst is sent abroad to represent Newfoundland upon an International Fisheries Commission, it is time for some one to make a protest. Imagine you ermen of this Ancient and Loyal Colony, a geologist repreenting you on a most vital matter of importance to the Colony and to yourselves. Wales is a coal country, and we could readily grant to Mr. Davies a most perfect knowledge of all cost.—If you do not intend to that fuel means, but when it comes down to fish and fishery holiday season, you can at least no has been sent to represent is fish producing country, does ot or would not, or could not

Fishermen Left Behind.

We learn that when S.S. Sagona sailed for Labrador, through some misarrangement on the part of the master or owners, several Conception Bay fishing crews were left behind. When the steamer called these crews were ready with their motor boats and other belongings, but because the ship could not take the last mentioned, the men were also left behind. These men will not be able to go North until the next saiking of the Sagona, which is scheduled for July 10th, and they will consequently suffer a serious incon-

Thoroughly modern in his application Mr. Dean showed very clearly that the cause of failure on the part of great movements which had in them the promise and hope of a better human-ity was the lack of regenerated leaders. A regenerated human society was dependent upon regenerated individuals, men and women who had experienced the passing away of old things and spiritual re-birth. The sermon closed with a very earnest appeal to the talented singer, delighted the con- S. Wareson, A. and Mrs. Mugford and
