

Making Cups and Saucers.

Everyone knows that pottery is made from clay, but many people will be surprised to learn of the other materials used.

Ordinary earthenware is made from Cornish China clay, ball clay from Devon or Dorset, flints obtained from the seashore in the neighbourhood of Dieppe, in Northern France, and "China" or Cornish stone. The delicate and more expensive chinaware is made from china clay, stone, and ground calcined bone, most of which comes from South America.

The clays are churned up with water until a cream or "slip" of the correct consistency is obtained. The other materials are made into slips by grinding with water, and then the correct quantities of each slip are thoroughly mixed together. The whole is then pumped into a filter press, where the clayey mixture is retained while the water flows away. This mixture, still referred to as "clay," is now ready for the making shops.

Let us watch the earthenware cups being made, writes a potter in the Daily Mail.

The first requirement is a mould made of plaster of Paris, the inside of which is the exact shape of, but not larger than, a finished cup without a handle.

A piece of clay which has previously been evenly flattened out is placed in the mould, which is revolved while a tool is lowered inside to shape the clay to the side of the mould. When finished the mould is put into a drying-room where moisture is withdrawn from the clay, which shrinks and easily comes out of the mould.

The handle is made separately in another mould and when it is dry it is stuck on the cup by means of a little slip.

In another part of the room saucers are being made in a similar way. The top of the saucer mould is the shape of the inside of the saucer, and the tool which shapes the clay to the mould also rises the foot, or rim, on which the saucer stands.

Once they are dry our cups and saucers are ready to be baked, or "fired," as the potter calls it.

This is done in an oven like a huge ginger-beer bottle, which holds some tons of ware. To protect the ware from the flames it is placed inside large fireclay boxes known as "saggers."

When the oven is full of saggers the door is sealed up and the firing begins. It occupies from sixty to seventy hours. The oven takes the same time to cool, but the ware which is withdrawn from it is quite dull, without any of the familiar shiny appearance.

In order to get this glazed surface the ware is dipped into another special slip, but when it is "dry" it is again fired. Should it have any decoration, such as gold bands, it has to be fired a third time. Some articles with beautiful coloured designs have to be fired as many as a dozen times. These are, of course, expensive.

JAMES O'NEILL GREW SO WEAK HE QUIT WORK

But New Brunswick Man Now Says He Was Completely Restored To Health By Taking Tanlac After All Else Failed.

"Four bottles of Tanlac have done me more good than all the other medicine I ever took," said James O'Neill, 158 Rockland Road, St. John, N.B., dyer for Cornwall Cotton Mills. "About six months ago I got so that what I ate would form gas on my stomach that put me in perfect misery. To make matters worse I took cold and I felt like I had a bad cough. I got so weak from this and lack of nourishment I had to lay off work."

"Soon after I began taking Tanlac on a friend's advice I had my appetite completely restored, and I seemed to improve with every bottle. I have little or no gas from the stomach, sleep well and get up mornings feeling fine. Tanlac is certainly a great medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Repatriation Nearly Completed.

THE ROMANCE OF A WAR WEDDING.

RIGA, Latvia, (Associated Press)—Repatriation of the hundreds of thousands of officers and soldiers captured by the Russians during the World War has nearly been completed. Thousands of Germans, Austrians, Hungarians and soldiers of various other nationalities, whom the Russians took prisoner, have married and decided to remain indefinitely in the Soviet country. Among a detachment of former Hungarian officers passing through Riga recently en route home was Count Valentine Szechenyi, whose cousin married Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, of New York, the Count being accompanied by his wife, a young Russian woman, Princess Mary Gallitza. The story of the marriage of the Count and the Princess, which took place a year ago, was published in America at that time. The Count was permitted to leave a Soviet prison, under guard, long enough for the wedding ceremony. Immediately afterward he was returned to Andronyevsky prison, near Moscow, where there was a wedding breakfast of black bread, tea and coffee made of toasted grain, a substitute used extensively in Germany and other countries cut off from the outside world during the war. The Count and Countess, travelling under auspices of the International Red Cross with 300 other prisoners of war, were taken from Riga to Budapest. Later they planned to go to Constantinople possibly to make their home. Count Szechenyi and the other Hungarians, many of whom were officers taken prisoner in 1915, were exchanged by the Soviets for an equal number of Communists who had been in jail in Hungary. The Count learned to speak excellent Russian during his seven years' imprisonment, and before his discharge he had become a first-class electrician, having charge of the prison lighting system. Countess Szechenyi speaks excellent English, learned as a child, and plans soon to visit America.

A Typist Heroine.

A popular Paris evening newspaper and a well-known cinema company have combined together to create a modern version of old fairy tales. The newspaper offered a dowry of $250 in money, and the cinema company obtained promises from various big Paris establishments for a trousseau worth $2500, the whole to be presented to the most deserving French girl in Paris earning her own living. In all the large offices, shops, and work-rooms, the girl-workers were asked to elect the one among their number who seemed to them to be the most deserving of receiving the dowry. A selection of candidates was afterwards shown in Paris cinema, and the audience were asked to vote for their choice. The votes have now been examined, and the lucky winner has been designated by a large majority. She is Mile, Germaine Chalandre, a shorthand typist in an American bank in Paris. Mile Chalandre went through some of the worst horrors of the war, remaining at her home in the battle region, and at one time courageously giving shelter to ten British soldiers. For this act of valor she was given a British decoration. Her father was shot by the Germans for giving shelter to British officers, and her mother died in captivity. Mile Chalandre herself was for two years a prisoner in Germany. Since the war she has been a bread-winner for an invalid sister and two young brothers.

A Colorado couple had been on a honeymoon trip three weeks before they found that the Town Clerk had given them an automobile instead of a marriage license. He evidently thought the sparking days were still on.

H. G. WELLS writes: July 22nd 1921

"I am glad to take this opportunity to tell you of my complete satisfaction with this machine. It is exactly the typewriter for an author like myself. It is so light and small that it can be taken anywhere, and it is so sound and foolproof that it is always in good condition. I have needed a typewriter for years, but I could not find anything sufficiently portable, hardy, willing and easy, until I discovered Corona."

A surprisingly large per centage of men and women are troubled with an ache on the ball of the foot, commonly known as the front arch, or Metatarsal arch, having dropped. When this happens you are walking on bone instead of on the cushion under the ball of the foot originally supplied by nature and callousness result. What can be done to get relief? The most natural thing to do is to put on a shoe with a cushion sole. A difference will be noted immediately and comfort and ease will be yours as long as shoes of this character are used.

The Human Foot.

Our feet were given us to support and carry the body, lightly, easily, gracefully and safely. To do this the foot has been as wonderfully constructed as the eye has been to see, or the ear to hear. The 26 bones of the foot are meticulously tied together with ligaments and supported by muscles to give strength and suppleness. At each step these bones need free play. Given this, the tread is light, sure and springy. The foot is built like an automobile tire—flexible, resilient—to take the shocks of the road in walking.

Naturally, the foot is perfectly adapted to its functions, but man, through custom, has forced nature to diverge from her intent. Fortunately nature is kind beyond expectation, and when given another chance does her utmost to restore abused parts to normal again.

No other part of the human body has been so abused by squeezing, chafing, freezing and pinching as the foot. There are men who would abhor the suggestion of wearing orthotics, but who will compel a No. 9 foot—a perfectly normal, well-intentioned, graceful foot—to spend from 10 to 18 hours every day locked up in a straight-jacket of leather!
