MCARONALAMICA

Speaking in Spaniard's Bay, Mr. Hickman felt called upon te wn Coaker, saying he had sent him to the scraphcap, and had brought Coaker's hounds to heel. He had not, he said, so much as allowed a Coaker candidate to be named in Ceaker's own district. On the same evening, Coaker himself was addressing an F.P. U. meeting in Keels, Bonavista Bay, soliciting votes for Hickman's candidates, upon the ground that "a vote for Hickman is a vote for

And in the Advocate we read that "after this election, Coaker's influence will be greater than ever."

It would be an insult to its intelligence to ask the public which of the two men-Hickman or Coaker-would dominate if at crosspurposes on any important matter. Not only is it universally known that Coaker is the stronger individuality, but it is apparent also that Hickman is surrounded, in his party and in his Govern-ment, by Coaker men, and would be hopeless even if he had the desire to oppose a Coaker schelae,

But it is also universally known that no clash would occur between Hickman and Coaker if their Government would return They have the same purpose, and would work for the same en like two blood brothers.

That the end Ceaker would work for would be wholly selfish his political history attests, and there is nothing in Hickman's history to inspire more confidence in him than in Coaker. Both are actuated by a desire to make what they can while the making is ood. Pit prop and coal contract scandals, and West India subsidy lans, tell the public in elarion tones what their aims will be, and hose aims they will accomplish if the people be so foolish as to entrust them with power.

By all you hold sacred, electors, by your love of country, by living, even the instinct of self-preservation, lose not the opportunity hich Monday will afford to send to deserved obscurity the unholy pair—Hickman and Coaker—who aim to enrich themselves at you expens
