DR. WADDELL'S STORY

GIVEN IN DETAIL

Q. And they are available for the counsel?

A. Yes.

Q. What other bank accounts are kept with relation to the Alberta & Great Waterways and Construction company of which you have knowledge?

A. All the banking has been done of late through the Royal Bank.

Q. What bank accounts were kept with the railway company first?

A. Well, there was another bank, but I have forgotten the name of it.

Q. We kept a small amount of money deposited there, and then we transferred it to the other bank. The Trans-Canada Bank was the name of it.

Q. That is one, then we have the Royal Bank. Those accounts were in your own name?

A. Yes, all of these accounts were in my own name. The money was given to me to be spent.

Q. I don't wait that now, I just want to know if the bank books and accounts are available.

A. Yes, they are all available. They have been checked out of late.

Q. Have the Alberta & Great Waterways railway a bank account so far as you know?

A. No.

Q. Has the Canada West Construction company any account so far as you know?

A. No, the money has all been handed over to me.

Q. And you have handled it?

A. Yes.

Q. So that would afford the information that my learned friends require?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Bennett, your lordship understands I am limiting my examination. I don't want to go into the other matters now, although I have found myself going into other matters.

Q. It was a code like that, I assume? (Shown exhibit 16).

A. Yes.

Q. Re-examination by Mr. Walsh.

Q. Is this the code you used in ciphering your telegrams?

A. Yes, that has Mr. Goddard's name in it.

Q. Did you make up these cipher telegrams yourself?

A. No, not as a rule, I made up one and deciphered one.

Q. What one did you make up?

A. I have forgotten. There have been quite a few telegrams sent of late.

Q. To whom was it sent?

A. To Mr. Clarke.

Q. When?

A. Within the last month.

Q. Where?

A. I have forgotten whether it was Montreal or New York, or where it was.

Q. Then you put that message into cipher yourself?

A. One of them, yes.

Q. That one that you refer to?

A. Yes, and I have forgotten which one it was.

Q. Do you know what the number was that you made use of for the purpose of making up that?

A. Yes.

Q. What number?

A. Well, should I tell that?

Mr. Justice Scott: I think so.

Mr. Walsh: I think you are bound to tell it.

A. 2010.

Q. Do you know whether or not that is the same number that is used in all the cipher telegrams that passed between Mr. Clarke and any person representing the company here?

A. As far as I know.

Q. That is the same number by which the message that you received yourself in cipher was decoded?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you add that number or subtract it when sending?

A. When sending, subtract, and when receiving, add.

Q. Did you send any messages to Mr. Clarke or anybody else through any bank?

A. Through any bank?

Q. Yes, any telegrams?

A. I may have sent some in care of a bank to Mr. Clarke.

Q. Did you send any cipher messages to him or to any person representing the company?

A. I think I did.

McMillan, and he forwarded them, but what code it was, I don't know.

Q. Who is Mr. McMillan?

A. Of the Royal Bank—let me see, I am not sure. I sent two or three messages through the bank, but I don't remember when it was quite a while ago and I think it was the Royal Bank.

Q. Why did you send messages in that way?

A. No.

Q. Well, we didn't have the code then.

Q. When did you first begin to use this Slater code?

A. When I came back about a month ago from the north, I found it in the office; we hadn't a code before that.

Q. Do you know how it came there?

A. No.

Q. Who gave you instructions for its use?

A. I don't know. I knew it was in use when I got back, and I employed it.

Q. Up to that date, when you wanted to send a message in cipher, you sent it through the Royal Bank.

A. It was through one of the banks, and I think it was the Royal Bank.

Q. In instances of this kind, do you know what code was used?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you write out the message and ask the bank to put it in cipher and translate it?

A. No, I believe that every message that we sent out of the office in coded as far as I know.

J. A. McKinnon being examined by Mr. Johnston testified as follows:

Mr. Justice Scott: You were subpoenaed to attend here at 10 o'clock this morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Why didn't you come here?

A. I did not think there would be anything doing this morning, not all this afternoon.

Mr. Justice Scott: Your duty was to attend at the proper time.

Mr. Johnston:

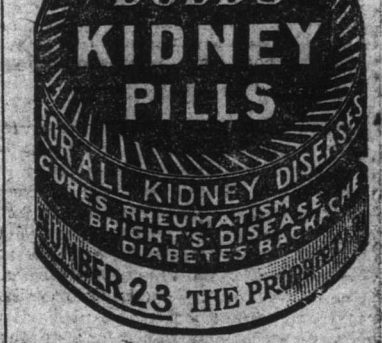

Q. You were examined the week before last for discovery.

A. Yes.

Q. I am instructed that there are a number of telegrams that were sent by you to various parties which you wrote in cipher. Is that correct?

A. There were some, res.
