This list is in striking contrast with the platitudes about the glory of war to be heard so often on the platform. It is a burning scandal and reproach to all who maintain war to be a necessity of human nature, and who feed the war spirit by appeals to the passions and prejudices of the people. The War Office, so wasteful in many directions, has no help for these miserable victims of a victorious war. The public who are asked to help them do not respond liberally to the appeal. Any who wish to assist may send aid to Lieut. Wightman, at Kensington vestry offices, London. The misery of these veterans is but a microcosm of the vaster calamities of war. Behind all its panoply of pride and parade of vain glory are ruined homes and broken lives, maimed and starving human beings, helpless and defenseless women and children bereft of their breadwinners or compelled to support those who should labor for them.

When shall their glory fade?" When shall their stomachs be filled, or their sufferings and the sufferings of those dependent on them, be atoned for?
