The idea should go over big. It offers the ordinary chances to any teams and The idea should go over big. It offers the ordinary chances to any teams and a good deal more competition to basket-ball players generally. Those who favor the idea will even concede the association may not be anything this year but "city league" in a disguise. They domaintain, however, that it has bigger ambitions than the old city leagues used to have, and that a start has to be made somewhere. somewhere.
The juvenile age limit will be under 18; the junior under 20 years.
