

NOTES.

- (a) This move is considered inferior to 4 Kt takes P.
(b) Not the usual continuation of the Scotch Gambit.
(c) This move of the Kt and his subsequent one lead to the beginning of White's troubles.
(d) Bold play, but in this case successful.
(e) Knight to Q 3 seems imperative here, in view of the formidable move of White, B to R 3
(f) Checking with Kt at B 6, and afterwards taking K Kt P seem to be the proper move here.
(g) The winning move.
(h) White has now a difficult position, especially with a Rook out of play; Kt to Q 4 would apparently be better than advancing K P.
(i) Losing time.
(j) The concluding moves are very well played by Black.
