"This work, as the title sets forth, is a collection of the best and most practical clinical lectures delivered in the leading medical colleges of the United States, Great Britain, and Canada. These lectures, after having been reported by competent medical stenographers, are arranged by the editors in a form best suited for the purposes of this work, and afterwards they are returned to the professors and lecturers for their personal revision. The reader is thus given the final thoughts and most advanced practical ideas of our ablest professional teachers. These handsome and well-printed volumes, which are issued with great regularity every quarter, contain a vast amount of instructive and readable matter. The range of subjects is as wide as that of medicine itself, and the lectures upon them are gathered from the clinical schools on both sides of the Atlantic. The publication of such a repertory of bedside experience cannot fail to exercise a marked influence on thought and practice, whilst the fact that a venture of this magnitude should have attained its seventh year of existence demonstrates that its volumes have obtained a recognized and sure place in periodical medical literature. Each volume contains some fifty or sixty lectures and commentaries upon cases of disease; a certain number of the forms are elaborated into general disquisitions, but the majority are purely clinical—that is, they are based upon cases under observation at the time of the delivery of the lecture. In our opinion, this is the only right form into which a clinical lecture should be cast. It does not and ought not to aim at being an exhaustive survey of the topic with which it deals, such a review should be reserved for the monograph or thesis; but it should bring out in clear detail the clinical facts attaching to the patient and deduct therefrom the lessons they convey." —London Lancet.
