

none is more vast, more complicated, or more necessary, and as such the present work will exhibit it to the reader. This volume treats of the following subjects.

History of the Roman Law.

Analytical Sketch of the Institutes of Justinian.

General Principles of Public and Private Law.

Obligations and Contracts.—Treaties or contracts between Nations.—We highly approve of it, and recommend it to the professional student for a studious and attentive perusal.

LE HERALD.