

GALLOWAY CATTLE.

FEW breeds have more ardent supporters than the lovers of this shaggy breed. These cattle are closely related to their neighbors, the Aberdeen-

Angus breed. The polled cattle of Galloway and western coast of Scotland are "pure bred" from the fact that outside breeds have not been mixed with the native cattle. They are principally beef cattle. They are straight and broad in the back, and nearly level from head to tail; ribs and body are round and full; legs short with good bones; deep broad chest; head is inclined to be heavy; eyes not prominent and ears large and full; skin loose, medium thickness, and fine black hair.

BULLS.

Any bull will sire a very much better class of healthy, vigorous calves if he is fed "International Stock Food" during the breeding season. It will keep him healthy and he will sire more and better calves.

QUICK FEEDERS FOR MARKET.

On your ability as a feeder depends your success in the cattle business. If you would feed "International Stock Food" every day to your calves right along and crowd them for market a much larger profit would be made than is made by the usual method of fattening. The reason for this is because "International Stock Food" will keep the digestion, assimilation and entire sys-
