habitually brutally abused and ill-treated the victim. Exquiries that were made showed that a similar infamous system prevails in all but two or three stables of the highest class. The surroundings seem to beget a callous-ness to human suffering. The boys are com-pelled to serve a seven-year apprent/ceship and are treated like slaves in the earlier years of their work. Tod Sloane, it is understood, noticed some of the evil effects of the system, and ex-pressed his surprise and disgust. The Boyal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has taken Luddon's case in hand. In the meantime, a growing popular movement has sprung up in favor of a Government inspection of all training sta-bles similar to that now maintained in factories and workshops. The inquest concluded to-night with a verdict that is tantamount to manslaughter against Taylor, and two of his subordinates named Headlands, who will probably be ar-rested.
