

OLDEST ROAD IN ENGLAND

THE WINCHESTER-CANTERBURY
HIGHWAY COUNTS YEARS BY THOUSANDS.

One Hundred and Twenty Miles Long and Built Before the Romans.

There runs from Winchester to Canterbury a prehistoric track which is probably the oldest memorial of men's action in this island. It is certainly older than the Romans—that is, it is certainly 2,000 years old. And how much older it may be than that we have no way of telling. But we do know that Winchester and Canterbury must have been the two great centers of the national life in the old barbarian times before the Romans came, and we may therefore suppose without too much temerity that this road is almost coeval with the existence of organized human life in Great Britain.

Two years ago I explored this road thoroughly. The whole distance is about 120 miles, and of that one may say that antiquarians had discovered much more than I had. I had, however, through exploration, about three-quarters of the remaining quarter some part was doubtful, and the rest unknown, but this unknown part did not make one continuous sketch: it was pieced in, as it were, along the length of the way, a bit here and a bit there, thus one would have ten or fifteen miles along which the old British road corresponded with the modern highway; then would come perhaps two miles of doubtful lane, the history of which had to be read and the direction noted before one could be certain that it was really part of the old road, then after that would come, say, half a mile of pure waste heath, or marsh, or forest, in which nothing but a most careful examination, the records of old maps, the evidence of place-names and so forth, helped one to identify the track of the British way. Then the highway would appear again coinciding with the old track, and so forth, long known or obvious bits coming in between short doubtful or unknown bits, until after infinite pains

Is Your Liver In Condition?

In a joking way you are sometimes asked "How is your liver?" And this question is more to the point than most people realize, for on the action of the liver, to a very large extent, is the health dependent.

In this connection is explained the success and popularity of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They wake up the liver, cause a good flow of healthy bile into the intestines, thereby removing the cause of constipation and indigestion, headache and biliousness, backache and kidney trouble.

You cannot easily overestimate the importance of the liver in relation to health, nor can you put too great value on Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a means of regulating the liver and overcoming the ill arising from torpidity of this organ.

The result of this treatment is a thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems, good digestion, pure blood, improved health and vigor. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmansons, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Why Orange Meat is a Food.

Over 44% of Orange Meat is wheat sugars.

Wheat sugars are food—that turns into good red blood and sturdy muscle—health and strength.

Orange Meat contains MORE wheat sugars, more phosphorus, more actual body and brain building FOOD—than any other cereal.

NEW PROBLEMS OF MARRIAGE

COMPLICATIONS CAUSED BY THE WOMAN WHO WORKS.

If She Earns as Much as the Man,
Should He Ask Her To Cut Her
Income in Half To Marry Him?

Marriage presents problems at the present day which were never encountered in the past. Here is a case in point:

A young man and his betrothed were schoolmates and became engaged during their last year in the high school. The understanding was that they should wait until he was able to marry.

He left home and plunged into business life. It was hard sledding for some years, but recently he pushed his salary up to the $2,000 mark, and was ready to marry.

Meanwhile his Rosalind had not seen fit to sit down and wait for seven years for him to get ready to marry her. She had gone into business herself, and as she had both brains and good family connections she is now confidential secretary to a house that pays her $1,800 a year.

The man must ask her to cut her income in two if she marries him. He does not blame her at all for going to work, but he does feel that his position is not an inspiring one to contemplate, for he must either ask her to cut her income in two to marry him, or else let her go on working for a salary after the wedding.

Cupid and Pecunia have not yet settled their differences in this case. In similar cases they have settled it in a variety of ways.

A few years ago one of the big drygoods stores employed a woman as purser for one important department. She went to Europe four times a year, with all her expenses paid and a big salary. In one of her trips she became acquainted with the purser of the vessel, and they made a love match of it.

The business woman was delighted to give up her fine position and a big salary to marry the man she loved and go to live with him in a tiny place. The man was the purser of the vessel, and they made a love match of it.

Now, see here, Johnny; you can't get a job, and even if you did you wouldn't earn more than one-third of what I can. If you are to go to see I might as well have no husband at all.

This was that great trouble. This was that nearly all the time. She worked so that finally he gave up his place as purser on a liner and tried to get a job ashore.

Like a good many other men who leave their own line of work, he did not succeed. Finally she said:

"Now, see here, Johnny; you can't get a job, and even if you did you wouldn't earn more than one-third of what I can. If you are to go to see I might as well have no husband at all."

Now, if you'll stay down here in the country and look after the baby and the chickens and the roses, I'll go back into my old place again; it's all ways waiting for me."

It was fixed up in that way, and the household is now a happy one. The man is the housekeeper and the woman is the bread winner.

In one of the oldest and largest clipping bureaus in the world the proprietor's wife has entire charge of the reading department. It began in 1838, when a foreman left him suddenly and she came down to help him out. She liked the work and has retained it permanently.

"You couldn't drive her away," says her husband, "and it suits me all right for she brings an intelligence and devotion to the business that I couldn't hire."

HOW MEN RISE; HOW MEN FALL

CITY DIRECTORY TELLS HOW TIDE OF FORTUNE IS GOING.

Observations of One Who Is Employed
Taking Names for Useful Book.

A man stood in the lobby of a downtown hotel, slowly turning the leaves of the city directory. Now and then he made a note in a small book which he held in his hand. A chance acquaintance of the rotunda addressed him.

"Well, did they spell your name right this time?"

"My name? No, it is not here," said the man. "It has been nearly ten years since my name has been in the city directory. I merely am looking up old friends after a long absence from the city."

"I suppose you find most of their names missing," suggesting the chance acquaintance.

"Not so many as you might think. In fact, I am astonished at the number of my former friends and associates who still are here. Some of them live in the same houses and have the same business headquarters as ten years ago."

"One might think that the working and business population would shift about completely in ten years."

READ FORTUNES AT A GLANCE.
"Oh, there have been changes striking changes," said the man at the directory. "I can follow my friends' luck at a glance, a two or three letter abbreviation indicates their present occupation, and tells the story of a rise or fall in the tide of their fortunes. A street address, even, bears mute evidence of their prosperity or adversity during the years of my absence. I do not have to hunt them up to learn what has happened."

The chance acquaintance was interested. "That is the first time I have heard a directory spoken of as a biography—a record of the careers of men, revealing the history of their ups and downs."

"It's true, nevertheless," said the man. "Here is an instance on this page." His finger pointed to a line of Hs. "There is a man who ten years ago was a clerk at $12 a week. Now, look at this."

The change acquaintance studied the abbreviations under the name. "Gen. H. H. H. & Co., Wash. St."

FROM POVERTY TO PLENTY.
"That man used to be a small clerk. As you see, he is now manager of a well-known business house, and lives on the boulevard, whereas he once lived in an obscure neighborhood. It is clear that he has made a big jump from poverty to plenty. How did he do it? I do not know, for I have never seen him. But this line tells the essential facts of his rise as certainly as if the story had been written up in the newspapers."

"Lots of men get rich in ten years," said the chance acquaintance.

"Yes; here is another instance, even more remarkable." The man at the directory turned over a few pages and pointed to a name in black type. "That man came from my town in the south. His father was a poor Baptist preacher, and none of the name ever had two good suits of clothes in one year in his life. Jim was just as ordinary as the rest of them, but he was a big talker, and bluffed till he made everybody sick about what he was going to do when he came to the city. He got a job in a clothing store here, for a year or two, and when he had saved up enough money to buy a desk and some stationery, and pay a month's office rent, he started in the real estate business. Things came hard with him for a while, but he kept talking big. He finally persuaded another young fellow from our town to take an interest in the business and pay the second month's rent."

JIM DIDN'T STARVE—NOT QUITE.
"I used to go up and see the boys just to hear Jim blow about the big deals they had on hand and the big money the firm was making. Bob, the other partner, didn't say much, but I could see that he looked sick, and I was not much surprised when he dropped out a month or two later. I asked him what was wrong. 'Jim is crazy,' said he. 'Just plain crazy. These big figures are all in his mind. We are not making a cent. I'm behind with my board, and I have to walk down town to save car fare. I've got me a job and am going to work. Jim can stay there and starve to death if he wants to.'"

"That was ten years ago, but I see that 'Jim didn't starve to death. Not Jim. You will notice that he is now president of the Jim Real Estate and Trust Company, as well as of the Jim Bank. He is trotting in the millionaire class, and I suppose he talks larger than ever."

"But not all of your friends grew rich, surely?" protested the chance acquaintance.

"Oh, no," said the directory philosopher. "Some of the stories are decidedly different. I encountered one just a moment ago. Here it is." He turned back to the Ds. "Look at this." The entry following the name read: "Elevator cond., — State st., h —."

LONG, HARD FALL FOR DICK.
"There's a lot of heartache in that simple record. Ten years ago Dick was prospering in the commission business. He had a lovely home. His situation was secure, and he was well on the way to a considerable fortune. But Dick had one weakness. He would gamble. Any sort of speculation fascinated him. The races, the board of trade, or anything into which the element of chance entered.

"Knowing this weakness, it is easier to account for the downfall of Dick than for the rise of others. He must have taken too many chances. Undoubtedly at this time his family is living on a sum that would have not been sufficient to pay his wife's millinery and dressmaking bills ten years ago. From one of the most charming homes in a beautiful suburb they have gone to live in a mean street in a poor neighborhood. Though I imagine that there must have been a tragic crash. I must pay Dick a visit, for we were good friends in the old days, but I know the meeting will be embarrassing for both of us."

"Poor Dick!" said the directory philosopher, sadly, as he closed the book and turned away.—Chicago Tribune.

130,000 Homes are Warmed and Fed from the Happy Thought Range

The idea that for an ordinary dwelling "one stove is enough" originated in the superior cooking and heating capacity of the Happy Thought Range. Few rural homes find need of a heater where they have this magnificent range. No stove inventor ever embodied so many good ideas all in one stove as did the designer of the Happy Thought. The arrangement of drafts, the construction of the grate, the circulation of hot air around the oven, the corrugated oven-lining, the ability to heat water and keep it hot are points that put the

HAPPY THOUGHT RANGE

in a class by itself. It can heat the whole dwelling in winter, while in summer the fire can be checked immediately after cooking, thus keeping the house delightfully cool. 130,000 households are now using it both for cooking and heating, and from all reports they would not exchange for any other stove in the world. Ask your dealer about it. Every Happy Thought burns coal or wood. Send to us for an illustrated catalogue—free.
