SKATING.

Price Defeats Logan.

Last night in the Queen's rink before a large crowd of spectators, Jas. Price defeated Fred Logan in a mile race, from opposite sides of the rink. Sackville and Truro.

The Sackville hockey team will play the Truro septette at the latter place tonight. This should be a great game as the Sackville are the league leaders in N. B. and Truro holds second place in the N. S. league.

HOCKEY.

The Next Local Games.

Don't forget the big hockey meet on Friday night, next at Queen's rink. This will be the second and last benefit night for the local boys, and they should be encouraged by a large attendance. Both the Mohawks and Neptuneans have improved greatly and two good games should be played Friday night. The first game will be between the Mohawks and Moncton and the boys say it will not be a walk-over like the last game they played at Moncton. The second game between Sackville and the Neptuneans should also be well contested as the local boys will have their regular team on the ice and will make it lively for the visitors.

Why Not Play in St. John.

An Amherst paper says—It looks as if the Sackville team was on the high road to win the championship of New Brunswick. A series of three games between Sackville and Amherst would be of interest to lovers of hockey, and in Sackville, cup in Amherst, and one in a neutral rink. Dorchester cannot be classed as a neutral rink for the Sackville team

Each has a victory to its credit, the third game being a draw. (Amherst Daily News.)

Nobody would ever have picked out Pittsburg Phil for a race track plunger. Except for his face, which in its deep markings gave evidence of the strain consequent upon his profession he was almost boyish in appearance.

Slight of build and smooth of face, he would have passed unnoticed in the thousands who thronged a race course. But when one knew who he was and studied his movements it was not difficult to realize that he was a man far above the ordinary race track bettor.

His face was almost expressionless, seeming scarcely to know a frown or a smile. He could lose or win $20,000 to a race and never blink an eyelash. Phil was really one of the first-class students of what is now known as "form" or in slang parlance "dope."

Most of his betting was done on an exact knowledge as to the probable for one to obtain on the racetrack.

more on Tuesday night last in what was to have been a six-round go. Young Kilrain is a welterweight and very strong. He was knocked out in the third round. The veteran heavyweight was behind his son as his second and adviser. At the start young Kilrain made a great showing. He was fast on his legs and showed wonderful celerity. He was too cautious to win in a hurry and in the third round he opened to a heavy right on the jaw, which put him out of the hunt.

A "Pittsburg Phil" Story.

Much has been written about George Smith, "Pittsburg Phil," who died recently at Asheville, N. C. Few men have had so interesting a career as he, and everywhere he was known as a man of great nerve. One incident in his life will serve to show Smith's remarkable courage. March 17, 1907, he occupied a ring seat at the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight in Carson City. It was at the end of the sixth round; the Corbettman was bleeding from the forehead and had been knocked down by the Fitzsimmons. Smith looked as though he could scarcely last more than two or three additional rounds. Men were going around with bunches of money offering $1000 to $500 on Corbett. With everything apparently against him, excepting his own judgment and confidence in the lanky Corbettman, Smith jumped to his feet and yelled: "I'll take 'em."

"As many times as you want," replied the Californian's backers. Smith quickly said, "Ten."

The result of the fight is now a matter of history. At its close Smith collected $10,000 in the same unobtrusive manner he made the wager.

His brother, pitcher Jesse, of the Bostonians, slipped on the ice on the street at Cincinnati Thursday and fractured his left shoulder.

A SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION.

The Valentine tea given last evening by the Seaman's Mission Band of St. John's Presbyterian church was largely attended, and proved one of the most successful entertainments given this season. Tea was served at small tables adorned with paper lanterns, and as the guests took their seats each was presented with a neat valentine. After supper the following excellent programme was carried out:—
