Toronto Paper Emphasizes Aid it Would Give in Food Production
(Toronto Star)
There is much that can be done in the way of gardening by city people not only in their own back yards, but in vacant lots, and in the idle farms that lie close outside the city.
The Rotary Club will, it is said, have had something to do with causing about a thousand gardens in operation this season, and the war productions committee of the board of trade is securing vacant farms near the city, and is organizing a large plan whereby these lands will be placed under cultivation, which everybody seems to be willing to take hold. Members of the office staff of one large financial institution are going in together on the cultivation of a piece of land, and will divide the work among them. It is possible that many of the churches may do the same, each gardening a good-sized piece of land by means of voluntary workers in the neighborhood, with a couple of experienced farmers to advise and direct, while owners of automobiles will transport the Toronto police force may cultivate a farm, and the crop, it is said, may be given to any of the public institutions. But the aim of all this food production is simply one to produce food. That being so, it would seem best in most cases—and especially in such a case as this, where policemen are expected to turn in and help on their weekly day off—that each man should himself get the proceeds of his labor. If a policeman grows potatoes and gives them away, he will have to buy others for

At the Front.
(The Brazier.)
Mac fell into the old mine crater one dark night and, as he sat in the mud at the bottom, someone mildly enquired, "Did you fall in, Mac?"
"Not likely," replied Mac with some blinikin' mine went up."

himself. The man who works in this way should be working for himself, that which he grows he will specially value, and as regards our public institutions, others than the policemen should produce their potatoes. This is not meant to discourage any excellent purpose the policemen have in mind, but it is said because human nature is what it is, and are to be expected to go out and work in the fields in their spare time, it will, we think, be best to let them have the ownership of what they produce. The main thing in the movement we are speaking of is production. The disposition made of what is produced is another matter altogether. A man works best, however, for himself. And a man works hardest when his reward is according to his efforts.
But if the workers of the city are to make gardens and produce all they can, when are they going to do all this work? The worker who does not reach home until seven o'clock and after that must wash up and have supper, has not time for gardening. There are thousands of others who will get a weekly half-holiday in June, but do not get this half day
