BOY SAVED THE EXPRESS

A signalman who had been off duty through illness a considerable time, started to work before he had fully recovered his good health, and his thirteen-year-old boy, on taking his tea to the box, found his father too ill to attend to his work.

Making his father as comfortable as possible, the boy went to the train register, where all signals sent and received are entered by the signalman on duty, and saw that his father had received the "clear" signal for the south express. Turning to the levers, however, he was horrified to see that the signals and points were put for the goods line. It was very foggy at the time, and while on his way to the box he had noticed a mineral train standing on the goods line directly in the way of the on-coming express.

The boy had on previous occasions spent a good deal of time in the box with his father, who had explained all the details of his complicated workings. It now served him in good stead. He reversed the levers of the goods road, and put the points for the express passenger line, then pulled off the signals just as the box in the rear rang up and gave the train entering signal.

In a few minutes the train entered past, and in the previous passengers ever noticing had it not been for that cool and brave boy.

TEN WEEKS IN BED—EMINENT PHYSICIANS FAILED—WONDERFUL RECOVERY

I wish to inform you of the great benefit I have derived from the use of Swamp-Root. I had been a sufferer for more than ten years from kidney and liver trouble and was almost constantly treated by the most eminent physicians who could only give me temporary relief. I had been in bed ten weeks when I began the use of Swamp-Root. Inside of twenty-four hours I could see that I had been greatly benefited. I continue to use Swamp-Root until I had used several bottles when I really felt that my old trouble was completely cured and I am positive that any person suffering with kidney or liver trouble can be cured by the use of this preparation.

I am now in the best of health better than I have been for ten years or more. I do not know how to express my gratitude strongly as I desire to do. Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root is the only medicine that I have ever used that has cured me. I have been in bed ten weeks when I began the use of Swamp-Root. "Last of the Medici" Story is Not Built on Fact—The Parnell Family—Stature of the King and Queen

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company.)

Almost every year newspaper readers are treated to stories from Europe of the death of "the last of the Medici," usually in very humble circumstances, and just at present a report of the same kind is being circulated, to the effect that the only survivor of this historic house has lately "shuffled off this mortal coil" as a sexton of a church in the Belgian town of Mons.

All these tales are rather misleading for the Medici, who retained their power and glory for several centuries, and who contributed so much to the development of Italian art and letters, were not of the Italian race, but of the French. Various branches, came to an end with the death of Grand Duke John Gaston, of the Medici, in 1743, without issue.

He was a weak creature, a degenerate descendant of his famous ancestors, and was forced by the terms of the peace of 1735, to appoint as his successor Duke Francis of Lorraine, brother of Francis Theresa, and who, on becoming Grand Duke of Tuscany, and afterwards Emperor of Germany, under the name of Francis II, surrendered his Duchy of Lorraine to France, from whom it was taken in 1870 by Germany.

There have been no survivors in the male line, since the middle of the eighteenth century, and the Medici family of Medici which claimed descent from Perseus, Benvenuto Cellini's bronze Perseus, holding on his head the head of Medusa, was executed and placed in the Loggia dei Lanzi at Florence, to symbolize the victory of the Medici over the Florentine republic.

It is known, however, that Silvestro Medici, who was the first of the family to obtain a distinct place in history, in 1378, had some relatives who never emerged from obscurity. Possibly the "last of the Medici" who died the other day at Mons, was descended from one of these relatives of Silvestro. But it is ridiculous to identify in any way the Belgian sexton with the great Florentine dynasty of the Medici, which flourished for nearly four centuries, and which established its name in the history of the world.

As mentioned in the case of the sexton at Mons is by no means an isolated instance. I have even heard of people in America who have made use of the name of Medici, for their armorial bearings, and who hold claims to be descended from the Medici Granddukes of Florence. But I have before me a genealogical chart of the entire Medici family, which definitely proves that it became entirely extinct in the male line in the eighteenth century, and that all such pretensions are therefore unwarranted.

Charles S. Swain, Parnell. In reply to an inquiry from a reader, as to whether Charles Swain Parnell, whose traits memorial was unveiled the other day in Dublin, had any other sisters besides the one who under the name of "Miss Palmer" was drowned last month in the Dalkey, he writes: "I would state that he had no less than six sisters. These were Delia, married James Thomas, of Dublin; Letitia, married Robert Munro, of Glasgow; the 10th regiment of infantry, and who presented a book of family reminiscences, entitled "A Patriot's Mistake"; and Sophia, who was Mrs. Alfred McDermott. All these had living issue. A fourth sister, Fanny, died unmarried, and the fifth sister, who was drowned the other day and whose real name was Catherine Maria Anna Parnell, also was unmarried.

The only surviving sister is Theodora Parnell, wife of Captain Claude Paget of the royal navy, a near relative of that Almeric Paget who married Pauline Whitney, New York City, formerly, wife of Lord Paget, wedded to the daughter of Mrs. Parnell Stevens, the owner of the now defunct Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York, and a member of that well known English family, the Marquis of Anglesey is the chief. The names of all Charles Swain Parnell's brothers and sisters are to be found in the pamphlet of "Burke's Peerage," under the head of Lord Conington, who is the chief of the Parnell family.

The King and Queen. Another question frequently addressed to me by readers, is concerning the difference of height between Queen Mary and King George. The latter's stature is barely 5 ft. 6 in. in his stocking feet, and precisely 5 ft. 7 to 7 1/2 inches when booted with big heels and heavy soles for work on the moors. Queen Mary's height is from 5 ft. 8 1/2 to 5 ft. 10 inches. But in this case shoe-heels and her rather high coiffure are included, so that the difference between them is not nearly so great—not much more indeed than existed between Alexandra and King Edward. The latter's stature was 5 ft. 7 1/2 inches in his stocking feet, and 5 feet 8 1/2 inches when booted; while Queen Alexandra's coiffure and heels included, is 5 ft. 10. King George's height is identical with that of his first cousin, the Czar of Russia, and superior by at least two, not three, inches, to that of the King of Italy; whereas Queen

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"T ALL that concerns eating and drinking, company, climate and ways of life, community of taste is to be sought for. It would be trying, for instance, to keep bed and board with an early riser or a vegetarian. In matters of art and intellect, I believe it is of no consequence. For these are differences which no habit nor affection can reconcile, and the Bohemian must not intermarry with the Pharisee."—Stevenson.

So I heard a woman say of herself and her fiancé. In answer to my query as to how they were opposites, she further explained that he was light haired and she dark, that he liked to read and she didn't, that she was fond of society and he was reserved and quiet, that he liked cold weather and she warm, and several other similar differences that I cannot recall.

As to the effect of the contrast between light and dark hair, the matrimonial union, I think, is difficult to predict, but as to the effect of the other differences cited, I should think the most simple-minded could be an accurate prophet in most instances. That is, unless he were blinded by that most foolish and misunderstood of catchwords—"the attraction of opposites." The notion that the attraction of opposites is a happy match is a popular actual error. It is not, unless the more natural it is that they should love each other and be happy together, because of this law of attraction of opposites, is a popular actual error. It is not, unless the more natural it is that they should love each other and be happy together, because of this law of attraction of opposites, is a popular actual error.

It may be that the phlegmatic and the highstrung, the even tempered and the impatient, the lover of action and the conservative objector, the reserved and the chatterer, get along well together, although it has always seemed to me that people of similar temperaments are quite as likely to understand and best with each other.

But that contrary of tastes should ever be regarded as a desirable condition in the matrimonial union, would be unbelievable if it were not so. And every interest which married folks share is one more tie between them, one more bond to contract the tender power of selfishness and individual interest, the more the tendency of all souls towards isolation, and the more they are united to one another, the more they are united to one another, the more they are united to one another.

Recent Deaths. Helen of Italy, like the younger of the two Empresses of Russia, is an unusually tall woman. In Bankruptcy Court. The Hon. Robert Douglas-Scott-Montagu, whose affairs have again been engaging the attention of the bankruptcy court in London, and who spent several years on this side of the Atlantic in a manifestly unsuccessful endeavor to acquire a knowledge of business, is the eldest son and heir of Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, owner and editor of "The Car" magazine, the foremost automobile in the United Kingdom, and the late King Edward into the sport and for several years connected with the royal household and the management of all the royal motor cars and chauffeurs.

Relative of Royalty. In the death of old Mrs. von Wuthenau at her chateau of Hohentann in Germany, the reigning houses of Austria, Prussia, and Russia as well as Queen Mary of England, have lost a relative. The chateau of Hohentann, picturesque castle was a daughter of the late Count Alexander of Wurtemberg, so famous throughout Germany as the "Black Prince" and the Duke of Wurttemberg, who was a prince of the house of Hohentann. Moreover, her only son, colonel in command of the 2nd Saxon Lancer regiment is married to Countess Antonette of Hohentann, sister of the Duke of Hohentann, and is a brother-in-law of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the murderer of the Archduchess. This sister of the Duke of Hohentann, Antonette by name, must not be confused with that other sister, Countess Henriette, who was killed on the very eve of the date set for the wedding by Prince Stanislas Radzivil, Countess Henriette never got over the affair, and is now one of the dames chanoinesse or lady canonesses of the Empress Maria Theresa convent for noblewomen in the royal palace of Hradshchin in Prague.
