description here. The process never varied. It always began when the intended victim, in the United States, say, or in Russia, received a letter supposedby written by an officer languishing in a Spanish dungeon. Prior to his imprisonment, the recipient of the letter was informed, this officer had deposited a huge sum of money in a secret place, the situation of which he was prepared to reveal would oblige him with a comparatively small sum of ready cash. "Finally, in the early days of last May, the German consul general at Madrid, Herr Loeker, received a letter from drid, Herr Loeker, received a letter from a manufacturer at Strasburg, one Max Mathenberg, who wished to know if in prisons of Corunna there was a major of prisons of Corunna there was a major of the parties at interest, but finally these was prepared to assume toward the city was prepared to assume toward the city was prepared to assume toward the city and the city was prepared to assume toward the city and the city cavalry named Jaquet sentenced for a were broken off, as an agreement could in respect to the arrangement of outdoor robbery. The 'major' had written to Mathenberg and offered to reveal to him through an agency office of Madrid the hiding place of a treasure of 500,000 pesetas, provided the German sent him 5,000 franc, which he needed urgently,

"This letter the consul general promptly handed over to the governor of Madrid, who called in the expert public inspectors, Senores Visedo and Puga, and Detective Morcatelli, with whose aid he arranged a simple but rather ingenious strategem for arresting the intending swindlers. Following out this plan the German consul general wrote Herr Mathenberg the following letter:

'Sir: The major regarding whom you asked does not exist, and the agency office to which you refer is an association of swindlers against whom you ought to guard. The police authorities of Madrid have decided to arrest these criminals, and you must aid them in doing so, otherwise you will be considered as an accomplice. You, therefore, must write to the "agency" mentioned, announcing that you accept its posal, and that you will come to Madrid in the South Express of the 22nd inst., to pay the 5.000 franc demanded by the supposed prisoner. At the same time, will give your personal description and mention that upon your arrival in Madrid you will carry in your hand a blue handke more easil.. You will add also that you are somewhat deaf. "It is possible," concluded Mr. Gow-ard, "that no credence will be placed in my remarks by many on the ground that am a prejudiced party. What I have said, however, cannot be denied. The interests of the B. C. Electric Railway Company and Victoria are identical, the prosperity of one means the advance of effort to make this city attractive to tourists as well as Victorians." In the course of his interview Mr. Goward hinted at numerous improvements to the Gorge next summer. As an illustration of an out-door place of musement he mentioned Lake Washington, near Seattle. He stated that at that of capital paid concessions to the city whoever owned the property for the privilege of establishing side shows of lifferent kinds.
