SOUL AND BODY. Refere the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with sin for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance, fallen from heaven;
And madness, risen from hell;
Strength, without hands to smile;
Love, that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of light;
And life, the shadow of death.

And the high gods took in hand live and the falling, of tears, and a measure of siding sand From under the feet of the years; and droth and drift of the sea, and dust of the lebosing earth, and bodies of things to be In the Bouses of death and or birth, and wrought with weeping and laughtes, and fashioned with leathing and love, with life before and after, and death beneath and above, For a night and a day and a morrow, That his strength might endure for a spar with travail and heavy sorrow, The holy spirit of man.

In response to Casgrain's attack, five thousand dollars, for the purpose of managing and taking over hotel Laurier said that Emmerson was in full sympathy with the G. T. P. bill, but had been so busy in his department that he had been unable to familiarize himself with its details. It had been introduced before Mr. Emmerson was appointed and it would not be fair to shoulder upon him the burden of pushing it through parliament. Borden, of Halifax, in reply, showed that Fielding, who had an almost equally hard department, found time to speak quite frequently during this debate and that Fielding during the debate and that Fielding during the interregnum between Biair's resignation and Emmerson's appointment, had discharged the duties of acting minister of railways. He contended that with this example before the house the premier's defence of Emmerson was not well grounded.

Garbng, of Charlotte, continued the effect on the minister of railways and attack on the minister of railways and pronounced his silence an insult to the whole country in general, and in terse language showed that he was he was in the local government, by ballot manipulation and kindred acts, fuse point blank to interfere in any but the mills of the gods, if grinding way in behalf of the many capable slowly, grind exceedingly fine, and Emmerson was nearing his reward.
