More Information Regarding Prices

David Magee and S. L. Emerson Give Reasons Why Prices Will Not Decline.

"The tendency of some people in certain quarters towards the belief that there will be a sudden decline in prices is certainly a mistaken one, and the possibility of such a slump for some considerable time is very the question," stated David Magee, of David Magee Sons, Ltd., furriers, when questioned in the matter yesterday.

"We have information from many points, and the substance is that there is no indication of any slump in the prices whatever."

Maintain Present Level

"We have every reason to think that prices will maintain their present level, because if you go to the market to purchase, the prices are firm. There is practically no decline whatever in any lines we carry. The condition last spring was that stocks of skins offered were less than the average and there has been no chance to augment these stocks. The high cost of labor and lack of raw material are two things which will prevent any receding of prices. In our business you sometimes hear of a slight decline in raw material, due to speculation, but that cannot effect to any appreciable extent the price of goods, owing to the cost of labor. In fact, certain factors are not buying stock or manufacturing because material and labor are so high. An entirely wrong impression has been created, and ever since last summer merchants have been endeavoring to meet the enormously high price of merchandise, although it is costing slightly more than last year, by individual store methods. Every article in our line costs more than it did last spring, and yet in many cases the prices have not been increased. Our business, however, has been very good, notwithstanding that weather conditions have tended to hamper it, and we look forward to an exceptionally busy Christmas season."

From Hardware Standpoint

S. L. Emerson, of Emerson and Fisher, Ltd., when asked regarding the business outlook from the hardware standpoint, said: "We would hardly hazard a guess as to what the future has in store, but we can hardly see any chance of a perceptible reduction. It is well to remember that it took five years or more for prices to reach the present level, and as hardware lines generally can be looked upon as actual necessities rather than luxuries, there is little chance of any sudden drop, and probably it will take just as long for them to reach their normal level. Sheet steel and cast iron are the basis of practically all the goods we handle, and the chief cost of these lines is the labor and manufacturing. Rather than a reduction in these elements, there has been a decided advance. Labor rates have also advanced during the last few months, and as far as we can see there is very little chance of labor being satisfied with a lower wage than the present scale. Supply and demand govern prices just as much today as ever. The supply of steel and iron is just about what it was two to eighteen months ago, and the demand must be equally heavy if the way our shipments have been coming forward to any criterion. Block sheets, galvanized iron and tin plate ordered in November and December last year are still being waited for, and apparently the manufacturers have not been able to fill orders that should have been shipped months ago."

Lack of Material

Only this week we had occasion to wire a concern about a certain line of goods that had previously ordered, and the reply came back to the effect that it could not be filled owing to lack of material, and there was no prospect of shipment until January or February next. Under such conditions, it is reasonable to expect any reduction in the price of such commodities? To continue in business we must have goods. To get them in the hardware line takes months, and it is necessary therefore to place our orders well in advance. This we have been doing and have placed many orders for spring goods at prices higher rather than below those of last year. Unquestionably, prices cannot stay where they are for all time, but until such time, however, as there is a sign of overproduction in the steel business, or at least a catching up with the demand, there is little chance of a drop. One of our foremost banking experts stated a short time ago that, owing to the high cost of material, high wages and increased freight rates, prices would be high for a generation; and a man in such a position should be in close touch with market conditions."

FOUND DEAD ON KING SQUARE

Body of Charles Stewart Found in Vestibule of King Square Residence.

About nine o'clock yesterday morning the lifeless remains of Charles Stewart, a colored man, was found in the vestibule of a residence on King square. Coroner Porter was notified and gave permission to have the body removed to Fitzpatrick's undertaking rooms, Waterloo street and in charge of the deceased brother-in-law, William McAleer.

For some years past Stewart has been subject to epileptic fits and has frequently fallen in the street. He was seen walking through the King square near midnight Wednesday and it is thought that he entered the vestibule of the King square residence to rest and died while in a fit.

Shipping Men Enter Protest

Request That New Bridge be Raised Five Feet—Other Business Common Council

The height of the new railway bridge across the Falls, the proposed lease to Mr. Crosby of land on Water street, street repairs and issue of additional capital by the New Brunswick Power Co. were among the matters taken up by the city council yesterday morning in committee.

A delegation composed of R. C. Elkin, J. Willard Smith, F. C. Beatey and R. A. Jamieson, representing the shipping interests, appeared and asked the council to take up with the C. P. R. the raising of the new bridge about five feet. They were asked to protest in writing when the council would approach the proper authorities in the matter.

Motion Voted Down.

Commissioner Bullock's motion to lease to the Canadian Moineaux Co. for now under lease to James H. McParland for a term of five years and six months at $20 per year was voted down, the Mayor and Commissioners Thornton and Jones voting against it. The appointment of Frank R. Blair as additional district commissioner at a salary of $1,200 per year was approved.

In connection with the proposed issue of $120,000 of additional securities by the New Brunswick Power Co. L. R. Ross wrote that this money was needed to pay for improvements and additions made since March 1, 1917. The matter of street work was brought up on an inquiry from Commissioner Bullock about Somerset street. Commissioner Prink said there were streets in the city just as bad or in worse condition and when the money was available the needed work would be done.

Sugar Truths.
(Daily Chronicle)
There is an abundance of "free" sugar now, as all the grocers' shops proclaim. The explanation is that the attempted American "corner" has failed, and that prices are tumbling rapidly. During the summer citizens of the United States were paying the equivalent of 1s. 11d. a pound for granulated sugar. If our own Sugar Commission had not accumulated reserves, and had not been able to buy the Mauritius crop, the price would have been still higher here and elsewhere. British consumers may be grateful that they were able to stand aloof from the American gambles. The prospects for next year are good, because Cereals, are again producing sugar for export, and the world will cease to be entirely dependent on the tropics.
