TOUR OF THE MARITIMES

With the Canadian Weekly Press Party in Halifax and Cape Breton

In an outline of the recent trip of the Canadian Weekly Press through the Maritime Provinces a sketch was given of things seen on the journey as far as Halifax, concluding with our arrival at Canada's chief seaport city.

We stayed in Halifax two days, where convention sessions were held on Monday morning and afternoon and Tuesday morning. Monday morning while the editors talked the ladies shopped, and during the afternoon they were taken for a long drive about the city and around the harbor, among other places seeing that part of Halifax which was destroyed in 1917 by the explosion which occurred on board one of the munition ships enroute to Europe, resulting in the loss of over a thousand lives.

In the brow of the heights just above was seen the residence of the Duke of Kent (Queen Victoria's father) during his stay in Canada in the early part of the nineteenth century. During drive around the harbour it was explained that the Halifax harbor is one of the three or four greatest harbors in the world. Unlike many others, it was not created by the erosion of rivers and streams. Its origin, according to the geologist, was a deep depression which took place in the earth's crust along this coast in the dim and distant past.

As a matter of fact there are three harbors in one, the elevated peninsula upon which Halifax is situated being almost surrounded by its adjacent waters. The main harbor, on which fronts the most important of its docks, is in itself capable of affording anchorage for an enormous fleet of ocean-going steamers, while further inland is the famous Bedford basin with a circumference of twenty square miles.

At the conclusion of the drive the ladies were taken to historic Dalhousie University which has a beautiful site above the shore, where they were joined by the pressmen. Afternoon tea was served in the fine new girls' residence which has just been completed and is the gift of Mrs. E. B. Eddy, wife of the big paper and match manufacturer of Hull, Que. We were told that it is one of the finest and largest residences for college girls in America.

Monday evening the party were the guests of the Waquoit Club at their fine quarters which have an ideal site upon the harbor. Here we had the pleasure of meeting and renewing old friendship with Mrs. Clarke, formerly of Glencoe, wife of the Rev. John Clarke, who is minister in one of the leading Presbyterian churches in Halifax. Mrs. Clarke had read of our coming and was glad to assist in welcoming and making it pleasant for those from the old home town. We regret not having been able to have met Mr. Clarke, as well as Rev. R. W. Ross, a former Glencoe pastor, both of whom were at the time in Port Arthur attending the General Assembly. The earlier part of the evening was spent in wandering about the beautiful grounds, and later a dance was enjoyed in the club house.

Tuesday morning a number of us got out a little early so as to be able to accept the invitation of Archdeacon Armitage to visit St. Paul's church, erected in 1756 by the Imperial authorities in order to provide a place of worship for the inhabitants of that day. The genial rector warmly welcomed us, and with overflowing pride and reverence showed us around the edifice, pointing out the numerous tablets in memory of noted men of history who had been connected with the church in early days, and telling us of its many historical associations. The church, being erected upon the order of Queen Anne, has the proud distinction of being the only royal church in Canada, and the king is the head of the church, and its rector in his church takes precedence of a visiting bishop. The royal arms of Hanover with its white horse are prominently located inside the entrance and upon the royal pew, in which have sat at various times the royal visitors to Canada, and is always occupied by the Governor-General when he visits Halifax.

Others of the party spent an hour or two in the city's famous horticultural gardens, said to be the best kept if not the largest of any in the world.

Another point of particular interest is the citadel, which is an eminence 255 feet in height, and is in the heart of the city. From the harbor the city's streets through the business section ascend steeply until they reach the foot of the citadel. At present it is little more than a show place, the main fortifications being located at more favorable strategic points on both sides of the harbor and on certain of the islands which stand at its mouth.

During the afternoon the party were the guests of the Board of Trade on a boat trip around the harbor, and we left Halifax that evening, our stay in the city being much too short to allow a visit to all the spots of historical interest.

While our trip to Halifax was by C. P. R., the return was by the Canadian National, and at the station in Halifax we found a fine C. N. R. train of all-steel coaches awaiting us. We arrived in Sydney, Cape Breton, at 8.30 next morning, where autos were again awaiting us, and after a drive around the city and along the harbor, which we were told was one of the principal gathering places for ships during the war while they were waiting for warship convoys for their journey across the Atlantic, we were taken to the big plant of the British Empire Steel Corporation, and were shown over the whole works, and saw ore going into the big furnaces and followed the process of manufacture through the plant, ending up by going through the noisy mill factory. The big coke ovens were also an interesting and instructive sight. We were told there was a likelihood of a big strike in the plant within a few days, and the daily papers are now telling us of serious disturbances there, with troops guarding the plant against the strikers.

After a visit to the yacht club we were taken to a large restaurant, where we were the guests of the British Empire Steel Corporation for dinner, after which the president and officers in brief addresses told us something about the company and the immense coal wealth of the district.

The city of Sydney is situated on a peninsula jutting into Sydney harbor at its southern extremity, being flanked on one side by what is known as the South Arm. Sydney is particularly noted as the site of the big steel plant, and since its establishment about twenty years ago it has grown from a town of 3,000 to a city of 28,000. In addition to its manufacturing importance it is a large wholesale distributing centre. The extent of the plant may be gathered from the fact that it covers an area of 725 acres, employs about 5,000 men and has a payroll of $14,500,000. Its principal products are pig iron, steel rails, wire rods and their various products, and ship plates.

We left Sydney about two o'clock for a sail through the beautiful Bras d'Or Lakes, sailing through the harbor out into the Atlantic and then up the lakes, on our way passing Sydney Mines, the centre of the big coal industry, catching our train again at Iona, near the centre of the island, travelling back to New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, during the night. New Glasgow is a prosperous city of about 8,000 population, and looked quite enterprising. We were driven to the big works of the Canadian Car Co., and shown railway cars in the process of manufacture. Short stops were made during the afternoon and evening at Truro and Sackville, where short drives around the city were given us by the Boards of Trade.

MOTOR FROM SASKATCHEWAN
London Advertiser:—Traveling 1,700 miles by motor from Saskatchewan to points in Ontario, Rev. J. W. McAlpine, Presbyterian minister of Rocanville, passed through London Saturday morning on the way to visit his parents at Glencoe.

Passing through the finest of weather on his way east, Mr. McAlpine was favored in another particular manner. His first blowout, and in fact the first mishap of any sort, occurred just a few miles before reaching London.

Through the west, Mr. McAlpine reports practically all crops in splendid condition and pointing toward an excellent harvest. The entire trip has taken but six days, which bears out his statement that the roads are in first-class condition. Mr. McAlpine intends visiting St. Catharines, Orangeville, Toronto and other eastern places before returning home.

ADVISED TO FILL COAL BINS

The strike in the coal mines of Nova Scotia and the threats of the anthracite workers in the United States are giving rise to apprehension regarding the fuel supply, both for industrial purposes and domestic heating next winter. C. A. Magrath, of the government fuel committee, has advised the public to fill up the coal bins now.

New York reports that Canadian industrial interests have made big purchases of coal in Mexico, and Welsh imports are increasing.
