

The Chancellor then proposed the toast of "Our Guests."

Dr. Body, our former Provost, replied in an able speech; he showed that he had not in any way forgotten his old home and promised a hearty welcome to any Trinity man who would go and see him, when in New York. Dr. Parkin then made one of his well-known stirring speeches and gave some sound advice to the undergraduates present. The Rev. Mr. Moody, the new headmaster of the Toronto Church School, also replied briefly.

Mr. D. T. Owen then proposed "Sister Universities," to which there replied Mr. Baker (Queen's), Mr. Cooper (University of Toronto), Mr. Trebilcock (Trinity Med.), and Mr. O'Donoghue (Osgoode Hall).

The last toast of the evening, "College Institutions," was very ably proposed by Mr. C. W. Bell in a speech witty and to the point. Mr. Turley replied, mentioning the T. U. A. A. A., the Literary Institute and THE REVIEW. Mr. Sait replied for the freshmen. "Μέτ' ἀγῶνα" and "God save the Queen" were then sung enthusiastically.

The following is the toast list:—

. banish long potations,
. make no long orations.
—Morris.

After the dinner was over the freshmen were all honoured with knighthood in the Order of the Sacred Owl. When this important and solemn function was over, the men assembled in a body and went out for a morning stroll. They serenaded S. Hilda's, Professors Cayley, Huntingford and Mackenzie and ended up at the Provost's.

When entrance had been made into college once more in a more dignified way than the exit had taken place, several gentlemen kept open house till about 4 a.m., when it was thought fit to retire to bed for a short space before taking up the duties of the day.

HALLOWE'EN AT THE PRINCESS.

ACCOMPANIED by from two to three hundred small boys, all the men of Trinity College—freshmen, seniors and grads—marched to the Princess on the eve of All Hallows last. Their songs, martial and otherwise, were rather marred at times, it must be acknowledged, by puerile cheers for "the students," but notwithstanding, everything went with a swing. Every man had turned out with a right good will, and bent on enjoyment.

The "rouge et noir" decorations stood out splendidly at the theatre, and, at least to Trinity men, were easily the best combination in the house. The faculty were represented in a proscenium box, which also bore the red and black as well as the big college Union Jack with the Trinity arms upon it.

As for the play itself "A Midsummer-Night's Dream" it is not necessary to say much about it; the daily papers have already made their comments, and they have all passed favourable verdicts. It would be impossible, even if one wished, to really criticise, as the general uproar above and around—the hanging and mutilation of Oom Paul, etc.—quite prevented any very fixed attention upon the stage.

By the way where did Varsity get the idea of hanging Mr. P. Kruger?

Mr. G. W. Hastings, B.A., '99, did Trinity proud in his rendering of "Theseus," the part being much more difficult than appears on the surface. Mr. Hastings delivered his lines with clearness and feeling, and succeeded in putting life and vim into a rather lifeless part. Miss Procter deserves special mention for her sweet and unaffected rendering of "Hermia."

Trinity's triumph came between Acts IV. and V. when after two or three ineffectual attempts "Μέτ' ἀγῶνα" was started; during the first verse there was no apparent decrease in the uproar, but by the time chorus was reached comparative silence fell, by the beginning of the second verse it was complete, and from there on to the end Trinity held the house. It is no small thing to hold the house even for a few moments on "Students' Night" at the theatre, and Trinity men may well feel proud of "Μέτ' ἀγῶνα" and be glad that they were there.

It is most unfortunate for the Hallowe'en Club that their enterprise was not as successful financially as in other ways; the idea is a good one and should not be allowed to fall through.

We regret that, owing to lack of space, we are compelled to hold over the Convocation sermon, preached by the Rev. Dr. Body, also the Literary Institute news and other items, till next month.

College Chronicle.

DURING the last month we have on no less than three occasions gone forth as a body. This is doubtless an innovation for Trinity, but it has been proved to be successful and popular. It is certainly a practical and simple way of bringing ourselves before the public, and whether the public are pleased or otherwise rests with ourselves.

F. J. Sawers, '01, has been appointed Trinity editor of "College Topics." We feel sure that our space will be always well filled every week.

Rev. R. Seaborn, B.A., paid us an ever welcome but all too short visit the other day.

Reverends L. W. B. Broughall and G. E. Ryerson took their M.A. degrees at Convocation. They both seem well and quite wedded to the back-woods.

The unfortunate accident by which Mr. E. M. Wright, B.A., broke his leg on the football field on Monday, October 30th, has cast quite a gloom over the whole college. Mr. Wright was running down the field with the ball and was tackled and thrown to the ground, his leg being broken by the shock. It was only a few minutes before Dr. Hegge was on the spot, and then and there set the limb. As no ambulance could be procured, the patient was taken in an express wagon to Grace Hospital. The many friends of Mr. Wright will be glad to learn that he is progressing
