ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS. (Concluded.)

READER:—Delsarte, the popular promoter of a system of expression, says: "There are almost as many walks as there are individuals. It is temperamental, as much an indicator of the habits, character and emotions as the voice." He also says: "The perfect walk must be straight, each step a foot apart (your own foot, not the ordinary foot measure). Bobbing up and down, pitching, rolling, strutting, must be avoided as gymnastic crimes. The great work of the movement falls to the lot of the thigh, the vital division of the leg. This is the strongest portion of the frame." The foot should be lifted but slightly, and although in its natural state, it "is fashioned to grasp the ground," yet when clothed in the coverings invented by men, the heel must perform first touch the earth; but let it be as lightly as possible, since heavily striking the heel in walking is not only detrimental to health from the succession of shocks given the system and brain, but is considered a noisy vulgarity, and is, as well, productive of extreme ungracefulness. A flexibility at the waist-line is also one of the necessities of a graceful carriage, and these muscles should be regularly exercised by forward, backward and rotary bendings, in order to make them subject to the will of the walker, and to render the swaying movements of the body harmonious with the action of the lower limbs.

PROSPECTIVE:—The etiquette for day and evening weddings varies but little, and the chief differences are those which effect the style of dress. A bride is privileged to wear full evening dress to her wedding, even though it takes place at ten in the morning; but the groom, best man, ushers and all the guests at a day wedding wear morning dress. The latter consists of a frock coat and waistcoat of prevailing style, lighter trousers, a stiff hat and light or white scarf, with gloves which may be of any shade suited to street wear but not of evening tint. The wearing of gloves is recommended by etiquette, but individual opinions and the obvious etiquette of dress on this point are often overruled by personal preferences. The rule and the exceptions are stated when it is said that gloves are a part of morning dress for gentlemen, and also when it is added that many gentlemen, bridegrooms included, go ungloved, to morning weddings. For groom and best man gloves should be of pearl color with some colored stitching; but with back stitching for ushers.

DON'T HAVE TO.

To dress well one don't have to buy a new suit of clothes or a new mantle every season. Let us look over your last season's suit or coat. We will likely be able to dye or clean it and make it spic and span again. And the cost is very little.
