HUGHES, Alexander, soldier and statesman, was b. at Brantford,

Ont., 1846. In 1861 he entered the 7th Wisconsin State Volunteers, and served in the field during the continuation of the Am. civil war. At the battle of Gainesville he was wounded and taken prisoner, but escaping, was again wounded at South Mountain, Sept. 14, 1862. At Gettysburg, he was shot in the left side, and again, in the famous charge at Spottsylvania Ct. House, 1864, he received a stunning blow upon the head from a rebel musket, and a gunshot wound in the right knee, the ball remaining there for 6 yrs. after the war. At the battle of North Anna, he received a gunshot wound which entered the left side, breaking a rib, and then passed round to the right side. This shot seriously injured his spine, 13 pieces of bone being removed from that one wound. He was not able to sit up a whole day during the 2 yrs. succeeding his last wound. He was in every battle in which the Iron Brigade fought, from Gainesville up to North Anna, except the battle of Antietam, and would have been there but for the wounds he had received at Gainesville and South Mountain. After the war, Capt. H. studied law, and became supdt. of a public institution in Iowa. He m. 1869, and removing to Dakota, 1870, became Atty.-Genl. of the Territory. He has also filled several other positions of public responsibility.—Bismarck, Dak., U.S.
