

THE LITTLE GIRL BOOK

things only, but many of them can do them all.

When these living objects had been created, God made man, and gave him other qualities which helped him to be the ruler over all of these other living things. But when God put these living objects on the earth, he also created them so that they would die and for that reason he worked out a very beautiful plan whereby each kind of life could be made to reproduce other life just like its own. You can see that this is a very valuable thing for the people in the world, and was necessary on account of the way people live. We eat the vegetables which grow and kill a good many of the different kinds of animals to supply ourselves with food, and if there were no way to cause these things to grow up again, all of the vegetables, and all