Mr. Hewlett turned into a restaurant which commanded a view of the office, and ordered a cup of coffee, taking care to secure a seat in the window. He was long sighted enough to note how Gregory's face looked as the time went on, how he kicked his feet savagely against the door post, regardless of the registrar's pain. Presently another customer came into the coffee shop, a man who had been lounging at a street corner higher up. He handed Hewlett a paper from Inspector Hudger—Cecile de Lavelle, alias Shirley, had been arrested and was now safely lodged in prison.

So far Septimus Lockyer's plans had prospered, but as the detective well knew, the most ticklish part of the work remained to be accomplished.
A boy came slowly sauntering down the street—a boy who might have been Mr. Edward Wallace's younger brother save that he wore the uniform of a messenger. Mr. Hewlett left his coffee and boldly crossed the road just as the boy accosted Gregory.
"Mr. James Gregory," the messenger said airily.
"Gregory looked at him.
"That is my name. What do you want?"
"Lady said you was to be told she was prevented from coming," the messenger said glibly. "Went away in a taxi early this morning with a gentleman, she did. You had ought to have had the message sooner, before you started, but Mrs. Jones, the landlady, it was her busy day, she says, and she couldn't send around at once. She hopes you will excuse it."
"Excuse it?" Gregory exclaimed. "I'll be level with her for this, the lying hussy. I'll let her fine lord see what sort of a woman he has gone off with."
The moment for action had arrived. Hewlett stopped to read a notice. As Gregory swung himself off the steps two men in plain clothes came towards him. As if by magic a couple of policemen appeared on either hand. Inspector Hudger touched Gregory's arm.
"James Gregory, I arrest you as an accessory after the fact in connection with the murder of Evelyn Spencer on the evening of May, 1897. And I must warn you that anything you say may be used in evidence against you."
"What?" It was evident that Gregory's first instinct was towards flight, and he thrust out his bullet head and tried to shake himself free from the Inspector's grasp. But he had not reckoned with the strength of the Inspector's grasp or with the men that in a trice surrounded him. Before he had in the least realized his position the handcuffs were securely on his wrists and he was being marched off to the police station. Then his big frame seemed to collapse, his face turned a curious bloated purple.
"—this is her doing, the hussy," he said between his teeth. "I'll be level with her yet. I promised her I would just take me to the proper folks and I'll make a clean breast of it."
CHAPTER XXIX
"Have you seen the papers this morning, Joan?" Lord Warchester's tone was abrupt, almost curt.
Joan was standing in the hall, warming her hands at the fire and waiting for Cynthia. At the sound of her husband's voice she started violently, the tell-tale color flooded her cheeks. She did not turn for a white. Warchester looked at her. No one would have guessed the mad passion of longing that seized him as he gazed at his wife's daintily averted cheek, the red revolt against the fate that had been his for the last three months.

"At last Joan turned.
"No," she said slowly, "no, not this morning. Why?"
"Her face was very pale now; the shadow of a terrible dread lay in her brown eyes.
"Warchester averted his gaze.
"Cecile de Lavelle was arrested last night for the murder of your sister Evelyn."
"Ah," Joan put up one ungloved hand to the lace at her throat; her eyes were fixed on Warchester, haunting, accusing.
"Is that why you have come up this morning?"
"I came up last night," Warchester corrected. "Your uncle Lockyer, wired to me. He thought no good purpose could be served by telling you last night, but to-day you were bound to know. It is most probable—may almost certain—that you will be called a witness."
"What?" Joan exclaimed. "What am I to do?" she cried wildly. "What can I do? How can I stand aside and let them accuse her when I know—"
Warchester made no answer. His face was very white; his gray eyes were dark with pain. She stepped

LA GRIPPE'S VICTIMS

Left Weak, Miserable and Prey to Disease in Many Forms.
One of the most treacherous diseases afflicting the people of Canada during the winter months is la grippe, or influenza. It almost invariably ends with a complication of troubles. It tortures its victims with alternate fevers and chills, headaches and backaches. It leaves them an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, and even consumption. Indeed the deadly after-effects of la grippe may leave the victim a chronic invalid. You can avoid a grippe entirely by keeping the blood rich and red by an occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If you have not done this, and the disease attacks you, you can banish its deadly after-effects through the use of this same great blood-building, nerve-restoring medicine. Here is proof of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over this trouble.
Mr. Emmanuel Lartin, St. Jerome, Que., says: "I was seized with a severe attack of the grippe. I was obliged to stop work and remain in my bed for several weeks, and while I appeared to get over the first stages of the trouble, I did not regain my usual health. I suffered from headaches, loss of appetite and extreme weakness. I did not sleep well at nights and would arise in the morning feeling tired and worn out. This continued for about two months during which time I was taking treatment, but apparently without avail. Then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a half dozen boxes. By the time I had taken three boxes there was a decided improvement, and actually before I had completed the sixth box I was enjoying my old-time health. I was strong as ever, could sleep well and eat well, and no longer suffered from lassitude and headaches. I have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for la grippe, and can therefore recommend them to other sufferers."
Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the trouble in the blood, which they enrich, and made red and pure. These pills cure all troubles due to bad blood, and if you are ailing you should start to cure yourself to-day by taking this great medicine. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"How did you hear?" Joan asked faintly.
"Celestine told me," Cynthia replied as she buttoned her gloves. "Now I do hope you are not going to worry yourself about the creature. Joan—as the change in her cousin's face struck her—'She is a bad lot.'
"She had nothing to do with Evelyn's death," Joan returned as she rang the bell. "Bring me a newspaper please, John—to the footman. 'Any one of them—' it doesn't matter which—' impudently."
Cynthia opened her eyes.
"Now, Joan, how can you possibly tell."
Joan made no answer. She seized eagerly upon the paper the man brought her and turned it over with trembling fingers. She had not far to look. The Grove street murder had attracted a considerable amount of public attention lately; it was accorded a paragraph on the front sheet.
"Grove Street Mystery. Miss Cecile de Lavelle, otherwise Shirley, was arrested by Inspector Hudger yesterday morning and charged with the willful murder of Marie de Lavelle, otherwise Evelyn Spencer, on the evening of May, 1897. Later in the day the accused was brought before the magistrate and formally charged. Merely evidence of arrest was taken, and she was remanded until this morning until ten o'clock. James Gregory, stableman, was charged with being an accessory after the fact. It will be fresh in the recollection of the public that the ill-fated victim of the tragedy had been on the music hall stage as one of the Sisters De Lavelle; it is her companion and so-called sister who has now been arrested by the police. It appears that for the last month she has been performing at the Alexandra, Islington, under the mysterious cognomen of the 'Veiled Dancer.' A touch of romance has been added to the circumstances by a rumor that the Veiled Dancer was on her way to her wedding when arrested."

Reduced in Flesh Sleepless Nights

Kidney Disease and Gravel Cause Keenest Suffering—Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. W. Smith.
"That disease of the kidneys cause the greatest suffering is well known, and when stone or gravel is formed in the bladder the torture is almost beyond human endurance.
The disease should never be allowed to reach this dangerous stage, or smarting when passing water, frequent urination, loss of flesh and weight, loss of the night, and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate and invigorate the kidneys and restore these organs to health."
Mr. W. Smith, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes—"For some years I was afflicted with kidney disease and gravel in its most severe form, having often a stoppage of water, accompanied by excruciating agony. As the disease grew on me I became reduced in flesh and passed sleepless nights. No doctor was able to do much for me, and many medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. My attention was directed to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by using this treatment the disease was eradicated from my system in less than one month. I have gained in weight, sleep well, and feel better than I have for twenty years."
