NO ONE-SIDED RECIPROCITY.

In an interview the other day, Mr. John Charlton said that he continues to devote his energies to securing reciprocity in natural products between Canada and the United States, and that he is much encouraged in his propaganda. He has established a "Reciprocity Club," in Chicago, and through it he is working. Mr. Charlton's missionary efforts are not well directed. Time was when our American cousins needed persuasion; now it is Canadian public opinion that is coy. Just to show Mr. Charlton that our neighbors hardly need conversion, we quote for his benefit the following from an American exchange:

"According to Mr. Bond, the Premier of Newfoundland he has secured the sanction of the British government to negotiate a reciprocity treaty between that colony and the United States, and is on his way to Washington for that purpose. We shall see in what spirit the Newfoundlanders' advances are met, but it may not be amiss in the meantime to consider the whole question of reciprocity, particularly with our northern neighbor. One would think that even the most thorough-going protectionist would not be unable to see, and would be willing to admit, that there are many products in which it would be to the advantage of Canada and the United States to trade freely. The Dominion has enormous undeveloped resources, its natural wealth of mine and forest, for example, is almost inexhaustible. It has practically the only workable nickel deposits in the world. Its copper, lead, and iron ores are of the finest quality and in sufficient quantity to supply the manufacturers of the Eastern States, at any rate, for the next century. Canada, and particularly its Eastern provinces, has the greatest forests of white pine left standing in the world, and has practically all the pulpwood. In a word, our neighbor has almost incalculable wealth in raw material for some of the most important manufactures. But Canada has neither the capital nor the manufacturing skill, nor have its people the kind of enterprise and push necessary for the building up of a great manufacturing community. On the other hand, the United States, particularly the Eastern States, have a superabundance of capital and their people are the most enterprising and pushing in the world. Surely statesmanship would be quick to see that here are all the requisites of a mutually profitable trade.

"The Eastern States could furnish a market for all of the ores and timber the people of Eastern Canada could mine and cut, and these, again, would be invaluable customers for our manufactured goods. Take the one article of hardwood alone. As has been said, Eastern Canada has valuable forests still standing. In the cities of the United States and in Europe there is a great and rapidly increasing demand for furniture, flooring, etc. In Buffalo and other American cities there are large factories in which many workmen are employed, and in which thousands of dollars of American capital are profitably employed, but, prosperous as this industry is, it would be greatly more so were it not handicapped by tariff restrictions. Could our manufacturers have free access to the Canadian hardwood forests, they could speedily reach out and secure the trade of England, and the European Continent. But let the present tariff wall be maintained and it will only be a question of time till the Canadians awake to the realization of the fortune that awaits those who first erect close to their hardwood forests factories for its manufacture. Had we been wise in time we could by a reasonable concession in the way of lower duties on Canadian lumber have prevented the imposition of the regulations which have had the effect of closing down forever the flourishing industries which made Bay City and Saginaw the manufacturing centres which they once were. What Canada has done in the matter of pine lumber, she may do with hardwood, and the splendid and profitable trade which is within our reach to-day would then be hopelessly lost to us, and we should see and be able to thank alleged statesmen for the sight—Canadian capitalists reaping the reward, which could be ours, and Canadian workmen, who are now content to produce raw material for American skilled labor, become themselves the skilled workmen, who, by reason of cheaper raw material, will be able to shut us out of the European markets."

Mr. Charlton will see that the people beyond the border quite realize what a good thing it would be for them if Canada could be persuaded to serve continuously as their hewers of wood and drawers of water. We have the natural wealth, and, fortunately, our people are awakening to the fact that this raw material ought to be utilized to furnish employment to Canadian labor. Our American contemporary rightly perceives that we have hardwood enough to keep many flourishing factories going, but there is no reason why we should not have these factories on this side of the line. If American capitalists can see a profitable future trade in taking Canadian woods, manufacturing them in New England, and selling the finished product in Europe, capitalists in Canada can manufacture the material here, and thus furnish employment to Canadian workmen.—Mail and Empire.

Charity Squanderers.

When Napoleon entered Genoa in 1805, the rich patricians of the city exerted themselves to gain the favor of the conqueror by all sorts of flattering attentions. The most elaborate of these was a banquet patterned after the famous one offered by Antony to Cleopatra.

The tables were set in an artificial garden, floating on pontoons, which were towed out to sea during the progress of the feast. At the conclusion of the banquet—again in imitation of Antony and Cleopatra—all the costly gold and silver plate was flung into the sea. This little tribute of honor to the emperor was not so expensive as it seemed, for the floating garden was surrounded with nets, and the plate was subsequently recovered.

What Men Like in Men.

Men like in men these traits: The honor that embodies the justice that ensures the right, the reasonableness that mellows and makes plain, the courage that proclaims virility, the generous instinct that disdains all meanness, the modesty that makes no boast, the dignity that wins respect, the fineness and the tenderness that know and feel. But when one thinks of it more carefully he may not sum it up in just a single sentence and accept it as the truth that all men like a gentleman?

A Prescription.

A schoolteacher in Frome, England, sent this to the father of one of his pupils: "I beg to inform you that in my opinion your son is suffering from myopia, and his case requires prompt attention." The next day the boy brought back this written request: "Mister, please knock it out of Jim, as I ain't got time."

The Samoan Language.

Speaking of the flexibility of the Samoan language, Mrs. Isabel Strong says that the little word "ta" means: "I, we, too, to beat with a stick, to play on, a musical instrument, to reproach, to tattoo, to open a vein, to wash clothing by beating and to turn a somersault."

Books Named From the Bible.

A close acquaintance on the part of authors with the terse and expressive phrases in the Bible is plainly shown in the titles of a host of books. Among the titles taken directly from the Bible, says the Saturday Evening Post, are the following: "If Sinners Entice Thee," "The Day of Temptation," "The Favor of Princes," "Wayfaring Men," "Weighed and Wanting," "The Wages of Sin," "Black, But Comely," "Dross," "In Dedar's Tents," "The Valley of Decision," "The Unjust Steward," "Sons of the Morning," "Visiting the Sin," "The Quick and the Dead," "The Prodigal," "The Bondswoman," "Tinkling Cymbals," "The Crown of Life," "Unleavened Bread," "A Laodicean," "The Birthright," "The Garden of Eden," "The Story of the Innumerable Company," "The Wings of the Morning," "Until the Day Break," "The Mantle of Elijah," "They That Walked in Darkness," "I Go a-Fishing," "The Tents of Shem," "The Snare of the Flower," "Give Me Thine Heart," "Mine Own People," "The Measure of a Man," "Resurrection," "The Market Place," "From My Youth Up," "His Brother's Keeper," "The Hosts of the Lord," and "On the Face of the Waters."

Shock After Burns.

Shock, which is always present in severe burns, requires the administration of stimulants. The amount of shock or collapse after any bad injury or sudden fright differs with the character of individuals. Some succumb to it much more readily than others. When serious, the temperature drops below normal, the face is pale, pinched and anxious, the pulse slow and feeble, the body bathed in a cold perspiration. Sometimes there is shivering. Sometimes the mind wanders. Place the patient at once in a horizontal position, the head slightly raised. Administer stimulant, alcoholic or aromatic vinegar. If whisky or brandy is used, give from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of hot water every ten minutes until five or six doses have been taken. Surround the body and legs inside the thighs and under the armpits with hot water bags, hot stones—anything to give warmth—but take care not to burn your patient. If the injury is to the head, follow the same treatment, but omit the alcoholic stimulant.

Apples and Currants.

If the liver is sluggish, refusing to work, so that the bile flow is deficient and so all fats remain undigested, the eating of either apples or an abundance of currants will effect a beneficial change. The jaded organ will be stimulated; all the digestive juices act; the food is all absorbed, and soon the appetite cries for more. Therefore the apple and the currant have been called appetizers because they are the means of bringing appetite to those in search of it. The apple being in season longest has the usual claim to favor as an appetizer, but the currant is almost as deserving of the claim. But it has more waste in the shape of fiber and skin than is found in the apple, the proportion in the currant being over 4½ per cent, while in the apple it is only 3.15 per cent.

Why Teak Wood is Durable.

The teak, which has passed into proverb as the best material for shipbuilding, is superior to all other woods from the fact that it contains an essential oil which prevents spikes and nails driven into it from rusting. This property is not possessed by any other wood in the world and furnishes an explanation of the fact that ships built of teak are practically indestructible. Since have been known to last for 150 years, and when broken up their beams were as sound as when first put together.

A South African Animal.

There is a curious looking animal in South Africa that looks for all the world like a piece of toast with four legs, a head and a tail. It resembles a pussy cat about the forehead and ears, but its nose is distinctly that of a rat, while its tail is not very dissimilar to that of a fox. This strange animal is called the aardwolf and doubtless dwells in South Africa, because, judged by his looks, he would not be admitted into good animal society anywhere else.

Misinformation.

Smith (angrily)—I understand you said my face was enough to stop an automobile?
 Jones—I certainly never said anything of the kind.
 Smith—Then I must have been misinformed?
 Jones—That's what you have. Instead of stopping at sight of your face, my reputable automobile would increase its speed.

Why He Desired a Cannon.

It is related that an Indian chief once approached General Crook and wanted to borrow a cannon.
 "Do you expect me to loan you a cannon with which to kill my soldiers?" the old veteran inquired.
 "No," the chief replied; "kill soldiers with a club. Want cannon to kill cowboys."

PIONEER DEAD

On Saturday morning at the ripe age of eighty five years, there passed away at his late residence, lot 16, concession 11, Harry Richmond, in the person of Mr. Wm. Pick, one of the oldest landmarks of this neighborhood. A native of England, he came to America 57 years ago, living for two years in Ohio. He then came over to Canada, working near Morpeth for the late Hooper King. A few years after he bought and finally settled on the farm on which he died. The following year he married Sarah Hewitt, daughter of the late John Hewitt, of Morpeth.

Mr. Pick served seven years as an apprentice at shoemaking, but when he came to this country gave up that vocation and followed farming. He was a member of the Methodist church on the Creek Road for half a century.

A widow and two sons and an adopted daughter survive him. They are Thomas Pick and George Pick, both living on the homestead, and Miss Ellen Pick, of Chatham.
