Less than two years have passed since our Government, seeing the necessity of doing something for the promotion of agricultural education in our province, wisely took a step in the direction of supplying this long felt want, by establishing a School of Agriculture in connection with the Provincial Normal School. The object of this school is to fit teachers to teach this important subject in agricultural districts, and to instruct farmers' sors in the science of their profession. In entering upon this our sixth volume, we would invite the attention of our readers to a few suggestion in relation to the year we are now entering upon. The difficulties to be encountered in conducting a newspaper in a small town, and the frequent cause fer discouragement to the publishers are many; and our readers are well aware that our experience in publishing the Acadian has been no exception to the general rule. Although we have met with difficulties and discouragements during the past year, we have been often the publishers are the general rule.
