

THE ACADIAN

TROUBLESOME NEIGHBORS.

Oh, could there in this world be found
Some little spot of happy ground
Where village pleasure might go round
Without the village tattling round
How doubly bliss that spot would be,
Where all might dwell in liberty,
Free from the bitter misery
Of gossip's endless prattling.

If such a spot were really known,
Fair Peace might claim it as her own,
And in it she might fix her throne
Forever and forever;
There like a queen to reign and live,
While every one would soon forgive,
The little slights they might receive,
And be offended never.

'Tis mischief-makers that remove
Far from our hearts the warmth of love,
And lead us all to disapprove
What gives another pleasure;
They seem to take one's part, but when
They've heard our ears, unkindly then
They soon retail them all again,
Mixed with their poisonous measure.

And then they're such a cunning way
Of telling ill-meant tales; they say:
'Don't mention what I've said, I pray;
I would not tell that to you;
Straight to your neighbor's house they go,
Narrating every thing they know,
And break the peace of high and low,
Wife, husband, friend and brother.

Oh, that the mischief-making crew
Were all reduced to one or two,
And they were scattered far and low,
That every one might know them;
Then would the villagers forget
To rage and quarrel, fume and fret,
Or fall into an angry pet,
With things so much below them.

For 'tis sad, degrading part,
To stain another's bosom smart,
And make another's name a curse;
Then let us ever be so true
In harmony with all around,
While friendship, joy and peace abound,
And angry feelings perish.

JOSIE'S MARRIAGE.

A Chicago Actress Weds an English Aristocrat

Supposing Him to Be a "Lord"—She Gets a Divorce—Suddenly Becomes Viscountess—Destines a Heirloom, But He Cautions, You Know.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his elder brother, Hon. Francis Galloway.
GRAND PACIFIC HOTEL, Chicago, April 12, 1888.—Dear Frank: It is ages since I heard from you, but I suppose everything goes on as usual, and that you can find nothing to write about. When I wrote to you about my engagement to Miss Josie Fairfield, only daughter and heiress of Jeremiah Fairfield, and I think I gave you a fair description of her. I am now in a fair way to become a Viscountess, and I am going to plunk down a fair share of my dollars in hard cash. I am in excellent condition, and, to use a favorite expression of my fiancé's, "am just having a lovely time."

Every body feels a nervous awe over me, and will insist on calling me "Lord Galloway." Titles here are held in the highest veneration; but the majority of the people have no idea of the difference between an honorable and a marquis. My future father-in-law took me over his pig-sticking establishment yesterday, and each time he came to a group of butchers at work he would stop them for an instant and say: "This is Lord Galloway, my future son-in-law."

There is one curious mistake that every one has made here, and that is that they have all taken it for granted that I am the eldest son and heir to the title, although I have never done or said any thing to cause them to believe so. As an old friend has already told all his friends that I shall be Viscount Decatur, and consequently his daughter a Viscountess, I hardly dare now to undeceive him in case he should want to break off the match. My fiancé has told all his friends that I am the daughter of a Viscountess, and consequently his daughter a Viscountess, I hardly dare now to undeceive him in case he should want to break off the match. My fiancé has told all his friends that I am the daughter of a Viscountess, and consequently his daughter a Viscountess, I hardly dare now to undeceive him in case he should want to break off the match.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his elder brother, Hon. Francis Galloway.
New York, May 12, 1888.—Dear Frank: The affair went off splendidly and without a hitch. All the Chicago papers teemed with accounts of the brilliant ceremony and the magnificent presents made to the bride. Unfortunately, they all accepted it as a fact that I am the father of the bride, and I have not yet had the courage to undeceive my bride. As we all for England next week I shall not say any thing about the mistake, but will leave it until after the wedding, when I shall say to you and find out that you are the heir and not myself. One paper in Chicago asserted that I should soon be a Duke, as my father, the Duke of Decatur, was in a very precarious state of health. That was a good stretch of imagination for a Chicago journalist. Good-bye, old fellow. Your affectionate brother, FRED.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his father, Jeremiah Fairfield.
GRAND HOTEL, LONDON, June 10, 1888.—Dear Dad: I am writing you with a broken heart. I have been the victim of a most shameful imposture, and I am the miserable, unhappy wife of the vilest of scoundrels. My husband is not Lord Galloway. He will never be a Viscount! He will never own Decatur castle! He will never sit in the House of Lords! But he will always be a miserable, sneaking, treacherous scoundrel. How could you let me marry him without finding out all about him? Your affectionate daughter, Josie.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his father, Jeremiah Fairfield.
Bright. Come home. Will meet Umbria at dock.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his father, Jeremiah Fairfield.
300 LONDON'S INN BUILDINGS, July 30, 1888.—Dear Dad: We have received the copy of the Chicago paper forwarded to us by you, and have made inquiries as to whether the advertisement to which you directed our attention is in America and in a legal service. We have also ascertained that in the event of a divorce being granted in judgment would go by default. In regard to your other questions we are acquainted with the divorce laws of America, and we have heard that divorce could be obtained in Chicago on almost any plea. We would recommend you to write at once to a resident lawyer in the town where the suit has been instituted or so there yourself at once.

once. Yours faithfully,
RUBEN, FUROR & Co.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his brother, Hon. Francis Galloway.
GRAND PACIFIC HOTEL, Chicago, Sept. 30, 1888.—Dear Frank: The agency is over. Yesterday the court, in response to the demand of my late bride, annulled the marriage which had taken place between us. The annulment was granted on the ground that the petitioner's consent to the marriage had been obtained by fraud and false representation on my part. Numerous witnesses swore that I called myself "Lord Galloway" and had stated that I was heir to Viscount Decatur. Of course my word was no good against all this. Old Fairfield, who gave evidence, described me as "damaged goods," and the judge paid no attention to me.

Indeed, I was told beforehand that the judge was sure to grant the plaintiff's petition. The fact is, this worthy is a candidate for a vacant judgeship in the Court of Appeal, and did not dare to run the risk of losing old Fairfield's influence. Judges over here are elected by popular vote, and old Fairfield, besides having the influence which is always attendant on great wealth, employs thousands of men in his pig-sticking establishments, and of course controls their votes. Thus it is that no judge who aspires to a higher office, or even to re-election, ever dares to say my name. Moreover, I am told that this old hog-butcher's political influence is so great that he controls half the State Legislature and can get any bill he likes passed by it, and that if the judge had refused to annul my marriage with his daughter he would have had a special act of Congress null and void put through the Legislature.

Although unquestionably it was very wrong to allow these toadies and title-hunters to continue in their self-created delusion that I was the eldest son, yet I certainly had nothing to do with originating that delusion. That was simply the offspring of a combination of ignorance and sycophancy.

I am going to remain here for a few weeks, as I have gone into a little speculation which I hope may prove remunerative. If it fails I shall be, as they say here, "dead broke." Your affectionate brother, RUBEN, FUROR & Co.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his brother, Hon. Francis Galloway.
LONDON, Oct. 12, 1888.—Your father and elder brother were both drowned yesterday off Cowes while out yachting. Yacht capsized. We await instructions from you.

From Hon. Frederick Galloway to his brother, Hon. Francis Galloway.
CHICAGO, Oct. 12, 1888.—My Lord: I read with the deepest regret of the terrible calamity which has overtaken you, and I hurry to offer you my condolences. My daughter is real sick with grief, and says she just longs to be by your side in your trouble. Now, my lord, I am willing to say, "let bygones be bygones," and let us patch up this little matter. No one is to blame but I, for it was I who forced you to come up here, separated two loving hearts, and I am really sorry. Shall Josie come to you? there is nothing but sympathy in return. If you and Josie will make up, I will make up. The ceremony could be performed quiet in my house or at your hotel; although so far as ceremony is concerned, I think marriages are made in Heaven, and no earthly judge has a right to unmake them. My daughter sends her love, and says she and I will come to see you this evening. I trust your Lordship will receive us with the same forgiving spirit with which we come. I remain, my lord, yours for ever, JEREMIAH FAIRFIELD.
